Active Preparations for Attacking Charleston or Savannah.

General Hunter and the Negro Soldiers.

From Our Special Correspondent.

PORT ROYAL, Saturday, Jan. 24, 1863.

After months of weary waiting and watching for signs of active movement against John Secesh in this part of Uncle Sam's domain—when at last it was almost like hoping against hope that anything would be done—we have suddenly been lifted out of the deeps of despondency to a corresponding elevation of enthusiasm and Hail Columbia joyousness. The first indication that our longing eyes to be gratified came last Sunday, when early in the day, the uncouth bulky-looking but formidable battery New Ironsides, came slowly up the harbor and dropped anchor near the Wabash. Before the flush of excitement and curiosity, resulting from the coming of this great, unwieldy thing, had passed away, the steamship Arago hove in sight, bearing swiftly up to the pier, flying at the fore the flag of long-expected Maj.-Gen. HUNTER. The satisfaction and promise of a "good time coming" which these distinguished arrivals awakened, was intensified and made certain on Monday by the appearance of the famous Commander WORDEN, with his scarcely less famous Monitor Montauk, and it only needed the advent of a third iron-clad on Wednesday, when the Passaic, Commander DRAYTON's vessel, was towed into the harbor, to excite our enthusiasm to a pitch which cannot be toned down for days to come.

Gen. HUNTER's return to this Department, as far as I am able to judge, is welcomed sincerely by the troops. When he was here before he was not altogether popular. His ideas and convictions respecting the Slavery question and the organization of negro regiments were far in advance of those of the soldiers. They were offended at what they termed his attempt to place the blacks upon the level with themselves. But now these prejudices have disappeared here, as elsewhere, beneath the wave of popular opinion respecting this subject, which the President's decree of emancipation has rolled over the land. On this point, then, there can be no further dissatisfaction, and I believe that the army will not be slow to accord Gen. HUNTER the credit which they know he deserves, of being an honest, pains-taking, earnest General, who is anxious to serve the country, and who takes a sincere interest in everything relating to the comfort and welfare of the men under his command. Gen. HUNTER's coming also augurs relief, by operations in the field, from the dreary round of life in camp, and this fact, of itself, is always sufficient to inspire soldiers with happiness. Since Gen. HUNTER's arrival the most intense activity has existed in all the Staff Departments of the Tenth Army Corps, and all eyes are strained seaward in expectation of large reinforcements of infantry and artillery, which, from last advices, we know to be now on the way hither.

On Thursday, Admiral DUPONT, accompanied by Fleet-Capt. BOGNAS and other members of his Staff, paid a visit of consultation to Gen. HUNTER, at which Gen. TRUMAN SEYMOUR assisted, and at which the general basis of the future joint land and naval operations was agreed upon. Of course I cannot tell anything certainly about the programme. I only know that among as outsiders there is great doubt as to what part of the coast the joint expedition will land when leaving the harbor—whether north to Charleston or south to Savannah. Some persons professing to be fully informed, say that Charleston is to be the point of attack, and there are not a few who have come to the conclusion that Savannah is to be first assaulted. Judging from all the preparations I can see, and the vast number and amount of stores now being shipped to Fort Pulaski, my own guess, if I were at liberty to guess, would be that Admiral DUPONT and Gen. HUNTER are resolved to do nothing meekly, but to make the first experiment upon the least strongly fortified city. Admiral DUPONT is of opinion that the torpedoes and other obstructions which have with so much pains been placed in the Savannah River and Charleston Harbor, will prove of little avail. An ingenious Yankee down here has invented an apparatus which will precede our iron-clads, piloting each expedition, and which will explode any torpedoes that may be submerged, either in the river or harbor, at a distance of not less than sixty yards from the bow of the first vessel.

I am writing thus freely of our iron-clads, and what is expected of them, without a suspicion that anything I may reveal will give "aid and comfort to the enemy." Indeed, I send you a Savannah paper, of the 20th, which announces the departure of the Montauk and Passaic from Beaufort, bound south, and that the Wachusetts and Nahant were to follow. Admiral DUPONT himself informed me that, notwithstanding his desire to keep their arrival here a secret, he was confident that the enemy would not long remain in ignorance of it. Besides, he felt it to be due the friends of the officers and crews of these vessels at the North, who naturally must feel anxiety, in view of the foundering of the Monitor, that word of their safety should be published. And here I may as well disabuse the public mind, by the testimony of Commander WORDEN, which I believe is concurred in by Commander DRAYTON, of any erroneous impressions it may entertain respecting the sea-going qualities of these inventions of Mr. ERICSSON. Both vessels were towed here, the one by the Rhode Island and the other by the James Adger, and the wind during their voyage was at no time heavier than what the sailors call a "double-reefed-topsail breeze." In this comparatively moderate sea way the vessels labored a great deal, in consequence of their peculiar mode of construction. Without entering upon the details of their build, with which everybody is, or ought to be familiar from the often-published descriptions, I shall only state that the "freeboard" of the upper vessel beyond the lower, or shall proper, affords an immense surface for the water to act upon. As the vessel is lifted by a wave and falls again, this overhang strikes upon the water with a thundering thud, causing a terrible jar, and straining the seam where the upper and lower vessels are bolted together to such an extent that in the case of the Montauk water rushed through. Possibly a better idea might be formed of the character of this shock, by supposing one of our Brooklyn ferry boats to be caught in a sea-way where the waves would have power to strike under the cabins on either side which always project several feet over the hull. This "overhang" then, as I understand in conversation with Commander WORDEN, while I was permitted to inspect his vessel, is an insuperable obstacle to safety in a heavy sea, and brings him to the conclusion that Monitors are only fit for harbor defences and smooth-water navigation.

Experience has also developed a great many minor defects in the general arrangements of the vessels which might have been obviated had Mr. ERICSSON been as much skilled in seamanship as he is in mechanical science. One cannot help feeling, after looking carefully through these iron-clads, and listening to what the officers say, that in their construction the inventor lost sight of every desideratum but invulnerability. That he has attained that, nobody pretends to doubt, but at the expense of most of the comforts and the convenience for the enjoyment of which many of the officers and crew would be willing, if necessary, to incur a slightly additional risk. In view of the cramped space on these queer-looking innovations upon naval architecture, and the replacements of living on board of them, there is a good deal of reason, I am inclined to believe, in what the grim old veteran, Admiral DUPONT, laughingly said, the other day—"that as Mr. ERICSSON had made these iron-clad machines, he should make iron men to fight them." The Admiral, who has all his life trod the poop-deck, and gazed scornfully down from that eminence to the subservient race below, is utterly at a loss, I imagine, to realize the immense revolution in the naval service which makes a "little Castle Garden on a raft," as the sailors on the Wabash designate the iron-clads, a formidable opponent for the magnificent frigate beside which they so humbly lie.

THE NEGRO REGIMENTS.

It is said that the Government has authorized the recruiting of 50,000 negroes into regiments, for service in this Department, as soon as they can be procured. The First Regiment of South Carolina Volunteers, under Col. T. W. HIGGINSON, is now nearly full, and yesterday Col. MONTGOMERY, formerly of the Third Kansas Regiment, arrived by the Star of the South from New-York, with a commission to raise the Second Regiment. There will be little impediment in the way of quickly doing this, if—as I am informed will be the case—the work of cotton-planting is not carried on next Spring, and the able negroes now on the plantations within our lines are encouraged to enlist. Last Wednesday Gen. HUNTER dropped in accidentally at the review of the First Regiment just previous to its departure on transports upon an expedition down the coast, the object of which I have not heard. The regiment made a fine appearance, numbering about 800 men, and parading 600 muskets. All of the men who had received military instruction during the past two months, and more especially the veteran companies first formed by Gen. HUNTER, did admirably. Whatever mistakes were made were those of the white officers, and these mistakes were of distances required in the various evolutions, for which the captains can alone be held responsible. It is impossible to conceive any higher aptitude for receiving military instruction than these negroes exhibit. Their changes of front, formation in square, and preparation to charge in double column, were executed with an harmonious rapidity and precision scarcely to be surpassed by any regiment in the command, although more than one-half the men have not been under a month's instruction. When they were formed in square Gen. HUNTER entered, on the invitation of Col. HIGGINSON, and was received with enthusiastic cheers. The General uncovered, and speaking with that terse force always to be noticed in silent men who seldom throw away words, said:

MEN:—I am glad to be in the midst of you—glad to have seen so fine an exhibition of proficiency as you have shown this day. I only wish there were 100,000 of you to fight for the freedom of the Union. I see no reason why you should not make as good soldiers as any in the world, and I trust that on all occasions you will be found willing to do your whole duty. I am sure that you are all ready to fight for the liberty of your wives and your children. Men who will not fight for their liberty are not worthy to have it, and will always remain enslaved. I shall do my utmost to look after your comfort, and to see that you are properly paid, fed and clothed. I wish you good day. I hope hereafter to meet you when you have earned distinction for yourselves.

RETURN HOME OF GEN. BRANNAN.

The best wishes of the community accompany Gen. J. M. BRANNAN, who goes home by the steamer to-day. Gen. BRANNAN has long been sufficiently to be sent North, and having made a special request to that effect, and believing that he could be of more service to the country in another sphere, Gen. HUNTER did not feel at liberty to detain him.

GEN. SEYMOUR AND OTHER GENERALS.

Brig.-Gen. SEYMOUR, the senior member of Gen. HUNTER's Staff and Chief of Artillery, is an officer of whom the highest expectations may be entertained, and who will be sure not to disappoint them. For his present position he is admirably qualified, having been stationed for three years in Charleston harbor, and was Chief of Artillery at Fort Sumter at the time of the capture of that fort. He has shot and hunted over every inch of the ground on both sides of the Savannah River and James Island, and all around Charleston. With this knowledge of the country in addition to being a thoroughly-educated, scientific officer, and a man of cool judgment, he will undoubtedly render important services.

Among the Generals expected to arrive here are Maj.-Gens. NEGLEY, STEVENSON, HUNT, brother to the Chief of Artillery of the Army of the Potomac, and Gen. WESSELS, all, I believe, of the regular army. Gen. WESSELLS will long be remembered in Kansas as the organizer of eight Kansas regiments, which were the best drilled and best disciplined organizations that existed in that State.

MINSTRELSY AND THE LADIES.

Fourteen men of the Third Rhode Island Regiment, under stage manager Capt. COMSTOCK, of that regiment, have organized themselves into a negro-minstrel company, and are occasionally assigned the use of the hall over the Post Commissary's depôt for their entertainments. This hall has been fitted up with much taste, having a regular stage, scenery and decorations. Here was heard all the popular negro and other melodies of the day, Virginia breakdowns and such like dances, inasmuch that one might almost fancy himself at Christy's or Buckley's in New-York. This illusion was heightened by the appearance there last Wednesday evening of about forty ladies—wives of officers of the post. And thereby hangs a tale!

The most intense fluttering and excitement has been caused among this portion of our population by the fact that Gen. HUNTER brought down an order from the Secretary of War that no more ladies be permitted to come to the Department, and that those there be sent North as rapidly as possible, that their presence may not interfere with active operations. On the announcement of this news such a buzzing and rustling as was heard, and so many traps, devices and stratagems were immediately put in requisition to capture the Major-General and soothe his heart to the point of making him withhold the promulgation of the order of the Secretary of War, were never before witnessed. The General, however, has notified the owners of the Adams Express line of steamships and the captains of all transport vessels plying to this port, that no contraband crinoline will hereafter be permitted to enter the harbor, and it is his intention, while observing all proper politeness to the sex, to cause the wives now here to see for themselves the propriety of going North at as early a time as possible, but it will be very painful to Gen. HUNTER's feelings to be obliged to order them away.

PROPOSED REMOVAL OF THE DEPOT.

Some weeks ago, I adverted to the lack of judgment which had been shown in selecting Hilton Head as our dépôt, when across the harbor, at St. Helena Island, an incomparably better place invited our occupation. Since that time, Col. HALL, of the Regiment of Volunteer Engineers, has surveyed the location, and reported favorably of its adaptability for a military dépôt. Already a dock 300 feet long has been constructed, and when it shall be carried out 600 feet from the shore, will give twenty feet of water at the lowest tide, a depth as great as that obtained at Hilton Head at 1,400 feet from the shore, which length the present pier extends. The anchorage at St. Helena Island is also far superior, being almost land-locked, and vessels could lie protected at the pier during the severest storms. At Hilton Head quite the reverse is the fact, as there is no protection against the prevalent easterly winds, and vessels are often seriously injured in heavy weather by thumping and grinding against the pier. The Arago this week was damaged to some extent by just this cause, and to prevent more serious injury, Capt. GADSDEN was compelled to go into the stream and anchor. The vessel had thus to remain idle two days at expense to the Government, until the weather moderated sufficiently to allow of her returning to the dock to be discharged of cargo.

DISCOURAGING FROM GEN. BANKS' DEPARTMENT.

The steamer Honduras arrived here yesterday direct from New-Orleans, with an urgent request from Gen. BANKS to the commanding General for a large supply of intrenching tools of all descriptions. From this we infer that the capture of Port Hudson, of which we have been anxiously hoping to hear, is yet a long way in the future.

H. J. W.

The following General Orders, issued by Gen. HUNTER, will doubtless be found interesting.

GEN. HUNTER'S GENERAL ORDERS.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SOUTH, HILTON HEAD, PORT ROYAL, S. C., Jan. 20, 1863.

No. 3.—Agreeably to special instructions from the Government, the undersigned hereby assumes command of the Department of the South.

It is with sincere pleasure that the General Commanding returns to this Department,—the brave men of the North, whose destiny has seen here cast, having never failed, although without many opportunities for great distinction, to do their whole duty when called upon,—as witness Port Royal, Pulaski, James Island and Pocotaligo, names to which every soldier of the command may look back with pride. Although not always successful—a thing depending on causes often beyond their control—they have the fully equal merit of always having deserved success.

In view of the active operations about to commence in this Department, the General Commanding would remind officers and enlisted men of the absolute necessity of a strict, prompt and unquestioning obedience to all orders. Without implicit, complete and hearty obedience, an army is a mere mob. With discipline, there is safety, honor, and the full assurance of being able to render substantial service to our country. The General Commanding would deeply regret, should a single man be killed while heedlessly deserting his colors; but he would remind all such that it is his bounden duty, imperative duty instantly to put to death any officer, or enlisted man, who should be found deserting his brave comrades who are doing their duty in front. Each officer who may find it necessary to execute this prompt punishment of cowardice and treason, will, as soon after the act as the exigencies of the service may permit, report what has been done to these headquarters, giving the name and all the other facts and of each witnesses as can prove the justness and necessity of the act.

No officer or soldier will leave the battle-field for the purpose of taking of the wounded, who will be much better attended to by the ambulance corps and the nurses. Even wounded men, helpless in the hands of their torturers, are often mangled to death while being improperly carried from the battle-field by sympathizers, who on the pretence of humanity are at least for their society to secure their own safety, regardless of the sufferings of their victims.

The attention of all Commanding Officers in this Department is urgently drawn to General Orders No. 26 from these Headquarters, dated Hilton Head, Port Royal, S. C., Aug. 15, series of 1862, and the same will be read at the head of each Brigade, Regiment, Company and Detachment on the parade next succeeding the issuing and receipt of this order. The General Commanding desires this in all ways and by every means within their power, Regimental and Company Officers will impress upon their men the importance of having a perfect mastery of, and reliance upon, their bayonets.

The following named officers are announced as the Staff of the Major-General Commanding, and will be obeyed and respected accordingly:

Brig.-Gen. Truman Seymour, Chief of Staff and Chief of Artillery.

Lieut.-Col. Chas. G. Halpine, Assistant Adjutant-General.

Major Edw. W. Smith, Assistant Adjutant-General.

Lieut. Israel R. Sealy, Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Lieut.-Col. J. R. Wilson, Assistant Inspector-General.

Lieut.-Col. M. R. Morgan, Chief Commissary of Subsistence.

Surgeon Charles R. Crane, Medical Director.

Major E. E. Paulding, Chief Paymaster.

Capt. James C. Duane, Chief of Engineers.

Capt. John W. Todd, Chief of Ordnance.

Col. James D. Fessenden, Aid-de-Camp.

Major Roland Wright, Aid-de-Camp.

Capt. R. W. Thompson, A. C. S., Acting Aid-de-Camp.

Capt. Wm. H. Dole, Aid-de-Camp.

Capt. Volney Hisbee, Aid-de-Camp.

Capt. Samuel W. Stanton, Aid-de-Camp.

Capt. Arthur M. Kinzie, Aid-de-Camp.

Lieut. Charles E. Hay, Acting Aid-de-Camp.

Lieut. Richard Skinner, Acting Aid-de-Camp.

Such vacancies as exist in the Staff will be filled and announced in subsequent orders.

DAVID HUNTER,
Major-General Commanding.

[Official copy.] WM. MCKINLEY, Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS No. 1.—I. The General Commanding has learned with regret that the officers and soldiers of this command are being greatly imposed upon by combinations of unauthorized tradesmen, who have settled within the military lines of this Department, and who now assume to act as Post Sutlers without contributing anything to the Post Fund for the benefit of the soldiers, or holding themselves subject to the usages and regulations of the army for the government of traders within military lines.

SECTION 1. It is therefore ordered that the commanding officers of all Posts, within this Department, including Port Royal Island, Hilton Head Island, Pulaski, Fernandina, St. Augustine, Key West and such other Posts as are now or may hereafter be established, shall at once proceed to appoint intelligent and reliable Committees of Administration, before which Councils all tradesmen, at each post, sutlers, clothiers, &c., &c., shall appear with full lists of the prices charged for the articles retailed by them, together with invoices showing the cost price of such articles; and each Council of Administration shall then establish rates of price for all articles to be sold by such tradesmen, allowing a liberal margin of profit in view of any risks incurred by such persons carrying on business within military lines; but sternly setting their face against the extortionate system of overcharging now so rife throughout this Department. The Councils of Administration are also authorized to make such other regulations as they shall see fit, subject to the recommendation of the commanding officer of the post, approved by these headquarters.

SEC. 2. The rates of price fixed by the Councils of Administration shall be printed and distributed through the commands; and two copies of the same shall be placed and kept in each store subject to inspection by all who may to make purchases; and any tradesman or sutler who shall be found charging in excess of the rates so established, shall forfeit all rights in the Department, and shall be sent North, having liberty to take his goods with him, by the first available opportunity.

SEC. 3. The commanding officers of all posts will be held strictly responsible that the sutlers of their commands are not imposed upon; and they will send to these headquarters copies of the lists of the prices established by the Councils herein before provided for.

¶ II. All commissioned officers within the Department are strictly prohibited from engaging in any species of trade, bartering or selling with the men of their commands; and it will be the duty of officers commanding posts, brigades and regiments, to cause the immediate arrest of any officer found violating this order. By command of Major-Gen. DAVID HUNTER.

CESAR G. HALPINE, Assistant Adjt. General.

FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

The Address of Gen. Hooker on Assuming Command.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Tuesday, Jan. 27.

The following order has just been published to the army:

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, CAMP BEAR PALMYRA, Jan. 26, 1863.

GENERAL ORDER, No. 1.—By direction of the President of the United States, the undersigned assumes command of the Army of the Potomac.

He enters upon the discharge of the duties imposed by this trust with a just appreciation of their responsibility.

Since the formation of this army, he has been identified with its history. He has shared with you its glories and reverses, with no other desire than that these relations might remain unchanged until its destiny should be accomplished.

In the record of your achievements there is much to be proud of, and, with the blessing of God, we will contribute something to the renown of our arms and the success of our cause.

To secure these ends your commander will require the earnest and hearty cooperation of every officer and soldier in this army.

In equipment, intelligence and valor the elements are superior.

Let us never hesitate to give him battle wherever we can find him.

The undersigned only gives expression to the feelings of this army when he conveys to our late Commander, Maj.-Gen. BURNSIDE, the most cordial good wishes for his future.

My Staff will be announced as soon as organized.

JOSEPH HOOKER, Major-General,
Commanding Army of the Potomac.

The only movements to-day is a change of locality for the camps.

Rain is falling.

The wind is southwest, and the temperature of the atmosphere mild.

IMPORTANT FROM NORTH CAROLINA

Departure of Gen. Foster's Expedition for Wilmington.

Gen. Naglee's Entire Command Preparing to Move.

75,000 Rebel Troops in the State.

The United States steam transport Ellis A. Terry, Capt. CRANE, arrived at this port yesterday, having left Newbern, N. C., on the 20th inst., and Hatteras Inlet on the 22d. She brings 14 cabin and 70 steerage passengers, mostly sick, discharged and furloughed soldiers.

An expedition, comprising three gunboats and a number of transports, under command of Gen. FOSTER, sailed from Hatteras Inlet on Saturday, 24th inst., destination supposed to be Wilmington. Another expedition was sitting out with quick dispatch, and would sail soon. Probably it has the same destination. It is said that it will comprise the entire command of Gen. NAGLEE.

NEWBERN, N. C., Tuesday, Jan. 20.
VIA FORTRESS MONROE, Monday, Jan. 26.

Capt. AMSWORT, of the Third New-York Artillery, stationed at Fort Hatteras, has received authority from Major-Gen. FOSTER to raise a battalion of artillery from the citizens there, and with excellent prospects of success. Major-Gen. FOSTER is desirous of the organization of loyal native North Carolina regiments of artillery and cavalry.

From Southern papers received here, it appears that great consternation and excitement has been occasioned in the interior by the reported concentration of National troops in this Department.

It has been ascertained that 75,000 rebel troops have been sent into North Carolina from the Rappahannock, and another force has been withdrawn thence for the Southwest. The rebels believe that the Army of the Potomac is completely demoralized and on the eve of mutiny, hence their withdrawal of troops to these points.

The Preparations for the Great Expedition.

From the Boston Traveller, Jan. 26.

A gentleman reached this city this morning, who left Newbern on Tuesday last. He came by way of the canal to Norfolk, from a Government dispatch boat. At the time he left, the potential expedition had not sailed, but it was expected that it would do so at any time. There was a large number of steamers at Beaufort, and large stacks of forage thereabout that place and Newbern. It was reported that two iron-clads sailed from Beaufort on the 16th. The Fifth and Forty-fourth Massachusetts Regiments expected to go on this expedition.

A small expedition, in command of Gen. ASHOW, left Newbern last Saturday, and had advanced as far as Pollocksville, twelve miles out. They drove in the enemy's pickets and several wagon loads of stores, &c., captured from the rebels, had reached Newbern. They ascertained that the roads above Pollocksville were obstructed by fallen trees. There had been no fighting reported. It was expected that Gen. ASHOW's command would return in a day or two, when the Forty-fifth Massachusetts Regiment would be detailed to proceed duty at Newbern, in place of the Seventeenth. Nothing was known of the enemy's forces in front, but it was reported that there were 40,000 near Kinston, and 20,000 at Goldsboro, with ubiquitous Stonewall JACKSON in command.

The sick at Newbern were well cared for, the hospitals being comfortable and supplied with everything needed. The troops were satisfied with their rations, but were anxious to see the Paymaster. Some of them had not seen pay for six or seven months. The place was overstocked with sutlers' goods.

Two mail steamers from Newbern are now probably on their way to New-York. One of them is now due there.

The following is an extract of a letter received in this City from a member of the Massachusetts Forty-fourth, dated Jan. 20:

"We are the only nine months' men bound off on the new expedition, which we call a complete refutation of any depreciatory remarks in regard to the regiment. About the expedition, nobody knows where we are going, but all know that it is a big thing, which will give honor to all engaged, and, in the end, either in combination with others, or by the Eighteenth Army Corps alone, Charleston will fall and we see our banner with Kinston, Whitehall, and Goldsboro already there.

"We learn that another gentleman who left New-bern on the 20th, brings the intelligence that Lieut.-Col. ROBERTS of the Forty-fifth Regiment, had left Kinston with dispatches for Gen. FOSTER from Gen. ASHOW's Expedition. Gen. ASHOW's command had driven a force of about 1,200 rebels from a place 20 or 30 miles above Newbern, and was then on its return, having accomplished its object.

The Forty-fifth had not lost a man.

A letter received in this city, to-day, announces the death, on Sunday, the 18th, of Corp. ARMAN J. UPHAM, of Co. D, Forty-fourth Regiment. He had been sick but a day or two. The deceased, who was only 18 years old, was a son of Gen. W. UPHAM, Esq., of this city. Prior to enlisting, he was in the house of THOMPSON, WEBB, WRIGHT & Co.

A letter from a member of Company E, Capt. SPENCER RICHARDSON, Forty-fourth Regiment, written on the 17th, says that company now occupies the position of color company. On the 16th, Gen. FOSTER issued an order, authorizing all the regiments that took part in the late expedition to inscribe the words "Kinston," "Whitehall" and "Goldsboro" on their banners. The writer says the Forty-fourth will have something to show worth seeing. He hoped to see "Wilmington" and "Charleston" added, which would be glory enough.

THE PRISONERS OF ARKANSAS POST.

Their Arrival at Cairo—Gen. Churchill—What he says of the Surrender—The Power of the Gunboats—Destitute Condition of the Troops—Their Ignorance of the Causes of the War.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CAIRO, Ill., Thursday, Jan. 22, 1863.

The advance guard of the rebel prisoners lately captured at Arkansas Post arrived here Tuesday evening, forming Gen. CURTIS, the commander of all the defences of the Arkansas, and the Brigadiers attached to the various regiments. They came up on three steamers—the Mississippi Belle was one of them. He takes his capture very coolly, states frankly of the events through which he has lately passed, and in common with the other officers, attributes their final defeat and capture to the destructive effect of the gunboats fleet upon their fortifications, which they had deemed almost impregnable. Our heavy cannon, however, were too much for their earthworks of wood and railroad iron, penetrating them like so much pasteboard. Their guns were dismounted or broken by our accurate rifle practice, and the gunners killed by our shot and the flying splinters of wood and iron which were scattered in showers among the rebel troops inside the fort. Two feet of one rebel 9-inch concentric gun was knocked off by a 64-pound shot from one of the Union gunboats, but the enemy succeeded in load and fire the piece several times, even in its shattered condition.

The rebel troops are in a very miserable condition for clothing, shoes and blankets; and must have suffered much during the eight days of cold weather that they have been on the Mississippi. They will be two days more in getting to St. Louis.

I conversed with some of them, and found some generally disposed with slavery. I should be at home attending to their legitimate business. As a general thing they can give no intelligible explanation of their conduct or tell why they were in arms against the Government for. It would be safe to assert that not one in five of the whole party ever read a newspaper or wrote his own name.

There were one hundred and twenty-five officers, ten Colonels; ten Lieut.-Colonels; ten Majors; one hundred Captains; five hundred Lieutenants, and some thirty or forty Adjutants, Staff officers, Quartermasters, Surgeons, &c., making a total of about five thousand. The rank and file of the Second Division. There was no manifestation of mutiny on the part of the prisoners, and they were generally quiet and civil in their behavior. They were treated with all the kindness which the crowded condition of the boats permitted, and were supplied with full regular army rations until the day before the boats reached this place, when the provisions gave out, owing to the prolongation of the trip, caused by the heavy storms against which they had to contend. A fresh supply of commissary stores was laid in here, and after allowing some portion of the prisoners to lay in a few luxuries, and purchase a little whisky for a very sick man," in some part of the boat, they again started for St. Louis. The gunboat Lexington convoyed the steamers to this destination. A storm or so did come up, and the boats stopped and buried the poor fellows on the banks of the river. One attempted to effect his escape by running away at one of these landings, and refusing to halt and return, was fired upon and killed. These escapes are all from Texas, and a considerable proportion are contrabands.

The Ohio and Mississippi Rivers during the last 24 hours have fallen slightly. DE SOTO.

IMPORTANT FROM THE GULF.

Escape of the Rebel Steamer Oreto from Mobile.

Her Arrival at Havana with 1,700 Bales of Cotton on Board.

A BOSTON BRIG DESTROYED BY HER.

The Doings of the Alabama off Galveston.

Capt. TERRY, of the steamship Northern Light, arrived at this port, informs us that news had been received at Key West that the Confederate steamer Oreto had got out of Mobile, and captured a Boston brig from Cuba on the 17th, off Tortugas, and sunk her.

The Oreto escaped on the morning of the 12th inst. She had been in the harbor four months, and was all the time carefully watched by our cruisers, and in number. The blockading vessels consisted of the Susquehanna, Commodore HITCHCOCK's flagship; the Kennebec, Oneida, Cuyler, Pembina, Kennebec, and three others.

It had been arranged that one vessel—the Pembina, which was of light draft—should lie over or beyond the bar, and in case of a movement of the Oreto should fire a gun, and that the Cuyler and the Oneida, the swiftest of the gunboats, should give chase.

The Captain of the Pembina discovered the pirate passing out at 3 o'clock on the morning of the 12th, but instead of firing ran down to the fleet and signaled the two vessels appointed for the chase. The Oneida misunderstood the signal and went in the wrong direction; the Cuyler cut off after the Oreto, followed by the Pembina.

The chase continued for several hours, all one time the Cuyler was within four miles of the Oreto; but it is represented that the vessels were not in sight during a part of the chase.

The Oreto went in the direction of Havana, and by the arrival at New-Orleans, it was ascertained that the pirate had reached Havana, and that she had on board one thousand seven hundred bales of cotton, all consumed of bales of which estimated.

On her passage she sunk the brig, of which the name is not ascertained. The vessel was, however, loaded with sugar.

It should be explained that a rebel boat loaded with cotton was captured to pass out of Mobile under cover of our vessels in chase, when the Oreto went out. The Pembina mistook the Oreto for that boat. Eight of the blockaders were at Mobile harbor at the time of the Oreto, which carried an armament much heavier than that of the Oreto, had not been before from the battle of Mobile Bay.

News of a battle at Berwick Bay, eighty miles from New-Orleans, up the Mississippi River, between a brigade of our troops under Gen. WELLER, and a force of the rebels, has reached New-Orleans. The rebels were beaten, but there were no particulars.

It was considered certain that the vessel which sunk the Fight vessel Hatteras was the pirate Alabama. The fight was very severe, and the Hatteras went down with her flag flying. Nobody stopping was found in the vicinity of the fight, but it is not known what was the fate of the crew.

Reforms at West Point.

West Point has as good a right as any institution in the land to a complete and thorough course of study, that develops every form of intellectual force and moral worth.

We hope yet to see the day when this will be realized. Yours of Jan. 21.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Senator LANE, of Kansas, proposes to write upon the tomb of the Republic—"Date of West Point."

That institution may well hold him and others in every position responsible for ignoring the "logic" and "reason." [illegible]

The annual reports of the Board of Visitors, the report of the Committee under the 6th section of the act of Congress of June 21, 1860, to examine into its organization, &c., abundantly correct its defects and wants. But when has it ever been able to attract the ear of legislation and bring it to the rescue? Claims from all parts of the land, its graduates, officers, graduates and others, have frankly and fully spoken their minds and given their opinions. And there the matter ended, until the day of trouble came, and then senators became lachrymose, and cry out "Died at West Point."

These reports reveal [illegible] The well spot within you have put your finger—Not talking and cry [illegible] with some means, the [illegible] sion."

1. Want of course of study in all respects adapted to its aims—impossible until the first evil be removed.

2. Want of schools of practice after graduation.

The remedy for the first evil is to encourage and assist the States, to establish State military schools, with a one or two years' course, and good theory, well ended, proved and most excellent in West Point, for a three-years' course. The Society for the encouragement of the arts, manufactures and commerce, may be formed for a revision of the present course for a complete and exclusively of military men. Form the 2d, the third, special schools of practice for the [illegible] arms, their instruction [illegible] as far as possible by a joint commission, in which each [illegible] presides. [illegible]

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE SAXONIA.

FURTHER RUMORS OF INTERVENTION.

Speech of the Emperor at the Opening of the French Legislative Body.

MEDIATION POSTPONED.

Debate in the Spanish Chambers on Mexican Affairs.

INTERESTING COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

The steamship Saxonia, from Southampton on the 14th January, with three days' later news from Europe, arrived here yesterday morning.

The news arrived at Queenstown at 7 P. M. on Tuesday, Jan. 13.

The Observer says: "Reports have been in circulation for some days past to the effect that the Emperor of the French had renewed his proposal of joint mediation between the contending parties in America. We have reason to believe that no offer of the kind has been made to her Majesty's Government, and further, that the Emperor has distinctly indicated to Mr. Dayton, the American Minister at Paris, that it is not his intention to submit any proposition for the settlement of the question in dispute between the Northern and Southern States."

A county meeting was held at Worcester on Saturday last to raise funds for the relief of the Lancashire distress. Lord Lyttelton, the Lord Lieutenant of the county, presided. In moving a resolution, Earl Dudley referred to the American war, and expressed his opinion that the time had come when the Southern States should be recognized as an independent nation. In this opinion Mr. Lyson, M. P., coincided. Sir J. Packington urged the people of Worcestershire not to imagine that the distress in Lancashire was passing away. He believed it would continue for some time, and he did not look for any early relief by the influx of cotton from America.

The Times, in its editorial, says: "A more decided movement in favor of peace is taking place in the United States."

The Paris correspondent of the Times says: Trade in Paris was still brisk last week, both among wholesale merchants and shopkeepers.

It has been remarked that the scarcity of cotton has insensibly caused a change in the habits of consumers, and that woolen stuffs have, in some measure, taken the place of cotton cloths.

The trade in petroleum continues to increase with extraordinary rapidity, and promises to become of so much power and importance to the country as to render it essential that the commercial public should not allow the business in it to be restricted by vague alarms as to danger attending its storage. The Minister of the Interior of Belgium has declared that this oil is not to be considered as one of the articles of inflammable merchandise which must be treated as essentially dangerous.

Her Majesty's ships Warrior, Black Prince, Revenge and Resistance, have returned to Lisbon from their cruise.

The American ship Nabob was wrecked, Nov. 6, off Hong Kong, in a typhoon. Seven men drowned and fourteen men saved.

The assembling of the Italian Parliament is appointed to take place on the 20th.

The Swiss Federal Assembly was opened Jan. 12. In the Council of the States, the President touched upon the apprehension that might be entertained for the future.

Without entering into particulars of American affairs, the President expressed a hope that the Union would be able to maintain its vitality without foreign intervention, as was the case in Switzerland during the period of the Sonderbund.

FRANCE AND AMERICA.

Address of the Emperor at the Opening of the Legislative Body.

The Session of the Senate and Corps Législatif was opened on the 12th by the Emperor, who delivered the following speech:

MESSIEURS LES SÉNATEURS, MESSIEURS LES DÉPUTÉS: The Legislative Body is about to commence its last Session. To have anticipated the term fixed by the Constitution would have been, in my opinion, an act of ingratitude toward the Chamber, of mistrust toward the country.

The times have passed when it was thought necessary to take advantage of a happy incident to make sure of the votes of a restricted number of electors. At the present day, when every one is aware that the masses no longer possess the recklessness of former times, convictions do not change at the slightest breath which seems to agitate the political atmosphere.

As we now meet for the last time, it is advisable to cast a retrospective glance upon what we have done together during the last five years; for it is only by taking a connected view of a period of years that a correct judgment can be formed of the consequent spirit with which the affairs of the country have been managed.

It is a usual thing to suspect in the acts of sovereigns some secret motive or some mysterious combination. Yet my policy has always been simply to increase the prosperity of France and her moral preponderance without abusing and without weakening the power placed in my hands; to maintain abroad, within the limits of right and of treaties, the legitimate aspirations of nations toward a better position; to develop our commercial relations with those countries toward which we are drawn closer by a greater community of interests; to cause from diplomatic precaution all the questions of litigation, so as to obviate all pretexts of misunderstanding; to act finally, upon a full reparation for any insult offered to our flag, for any prejudice against our countrymen.

It is thus that, according to circumstances, I have been enabled to carry out these principles.

In the East, the national wish of the Danubian Principalities to form a fully own people, could not find us unconcerned, and our support has contributed to accement their union.

We have given our support to what we thought justifiable in the grievances of Syria and of Montenegro, and of the Christians of Syria, without disowning the rights of the Ottoman Porte.

Our arms have defended the independence of Italy without tampering with revolution—without altering after the day of battle our friendly relations with our adversaries, even for a day—without abandoning the Holy Father, whose cause I honor and our past engagements bound us to support.

We have suppressed the causes of misunderstanding which might have arisen with Spain, either from the non-delimitation of the frontier line, or from the old debt of 1823; and with Switzerland the difference respecting the Valley of the Dappes.

Commercial treaties have been, or are on the eve of being, constituted with England, Belgium, Prussia, Italy, and Switzerland.

Finally, expeditions to China, Cochin-China and Mexico prove that there are not any countries, no matter how far distant, where any attempt against the honor of France remains unpunished. Such facts could not be accomplished without complications. Duty always at remote through danger. Nevertheless, France has been increased by two provinces. The barriers which separated us from our neighbors have been removed; a vast territory has been thrown open to our activity in the far East; and, what is better than boundless, we have secured claims to the sympathy of the inhabitants, without losing the confidence and the esteem of the Government.

During the years recently passed I have been enabled to hold personal interviews with most of the reigning Sovereigns, and from those interviews friendly relations have arisen, which are as many guarantees for the tranquillity of Europe, which cannot be disturbed by the events which have just taken place in Greece.

This brief sketch of the past is a guarantee to you for the future, that despite the presence of gravest acting events, and of opposing opinions, been that you will adm[illegible] have [illegible] unshakingly followed the same line of conduct. As more particularly regards our position at home, I have endeavored, on the one hand, by a complete amnesty, to obliterate, as far as possible, the remembrance of our civil discords; and, on the other hand, to increase the importance of the great bodies of the State.

I have called you to take a more direct part in the Government. I have given to the Senate and to the Corps Législatif, with the guarantees which freedom of discussion could claim. I have [illegible] the Legislative Body [illegible] the expense of a more absolute manner, and to give more solidity to the bases upon which public credit rests.

To reduce our expenses, the army and navy estimates have been reduced, and by the success achieved by the conversion of the Rentes a great step has been taken toward the settlement (unification) of that debt. The indirect revenues show a continual increase, from the simple fact of the general increase of prosperity, and the condition of the Empire would be flourishing if the war [illegible] fruitful sources of our industry. The forced abstinence of Mexican [illegible] cotton affects an amount of activity which [illegible] all our industries, and a great will be asked from you for the support of those who still languishing owing to the effects of a misfortune which it is not in our power to put a stop to. Nevertheless, I have made the attempt to send beyond the Atlantic advices inspired by a sincere sympathy; but the great maritime Powers not having thought it advisable as yet to act in concert with me, I have been obliged to postpone to a more suitable opportunity the offer of mediation, the object of which was to stop the effusion of blood, and to prevent the exhaustion of a country the future of which cannot be looked upon with indifference.

I shall not now enter into details respecting various administrative improvements, such as the division of an army reserve, the remodeling of the deaf institution for the benefit of the poor, great public works, encouragement to agriculture, to science, and to art, the maintenance of the prosperity of our colonies despite the suppression of the emigration, or the happy consolidation of our establishments in Africa, by our care in gaining the affections of the Arab population and of protecting our settlers. The report upon the condition of the Empire will give you all these measures in detail.

Useful work is still in store for the conclusion of your labors, and when you return to your respective provinces, let it not be forgotten that, if we have overcome many difficulties, and accomplished many useful acts, it must be attributed to the constant support of the great bodies of the State, and the harmony which has prevailed among us; nevertheless, there remains still much to be done to perfect our institutions, to disseminate good ideas, and to accustom the country to count upon itself. Tell your fellow-citizens that I shall be always ready to adopt anything in the interests of the majority, but that, if they have at heart to facilitate the work that has been commenced, to avoid conflicts which only lead to disaster, to strengthen the Constitution, which is their work—they must send to the new Chamber men who, like you, except without hesitation the moderate, who prefer serious deliberations to sterile discussions; men who, animated by the spirit of the age and by a true patriotism, will, by their independent spirit, enlighten the path of the Government, and who will never hesitate to place above party interest the stability of the State and the greatness of the country."

The Emperor Means Renewed Mediation.

From the London Times.

The speech of the Emperor on opening the French Chambers was expected this year with even more than usual curiosity. It was known that he could not help referring to the American war, and, from the proposals made to England and Russia a few weeks since, there was reason to believe that he would not lose the opportunity of again counseling justice and moderation. This expectation has been fulfilled. The Emperor in his speech on Monday adhered fully to the policy of M. Drouyn de L'Huys' dispatch, and more than intimated that he should renew his attempt at mediation. Speaking of the distress which the war has brought on French industry, he says: "I have made the attempt to send beyond the Atlantic advices inspired by a sincere sympathy; but the great maritime Powers not having thought it advisable as yet to act in concert with me, I have been obliged to postpone to a more suitable opportunity the offer of mediation, the object of which was to stop the effusion of blood, and to prevent the exhaustion of a country the future of which cannot be looked upon with indifference." That the Emperor would retain his opinion on the subject of the war was to be expected, but it was not at all certain that he would explain so decisively to his Legislature and the world that his plan of mediation had not been abandoned. The speech of the Emperor is another step in the direction indicated by the dispatch of his Foreign Minister. Again the Americans are told in effect that the war which the North is waging against the South will be without result, that the country is being exhausted in a contest the evils of which are felt more widely than those of any other of the present age, and that Europe cannot remain indifferent to the barbarity which shows itself every day more and more. There can now be hardly a doubt that the French Emperor will take every occasion to urge on the Federals the necessity of bringing this war to a close. It is probable that the United States Minister, Mr. Dayton, has already heard all that he can say against the enterprise in which the Federal Government is engaged. The deliberate judgment of Europe has been given by the mouth of the French Emperor, and though no formal offer of mediation has yet reached Washington, yet morally it may be said, intervention has taken place. The speech of Monday is but the authentic publication of those opinions which the Emperor has never concealed from either belligerent. It is a declaration that the progress of the war during the last two months has but confirmed him in the wisdom of his former policy, and that the time is approaching when the European Sovereign may fairly interpose to stop the slaughter.

As a politician, and a soldier, Napoleon may be satisfied with the accuracy of his judgment when he declared that the South would not submit and could not be subjugated. Since M. Drouyn de L'Huys wrote his dispatch the fortune of war has more than ever inclined to the side of the Confederates. In a great battle they have defeated the main army of their enemies, and demonstrated that Virginia and Richmond may be considered impregnable against all the hosts that President Lincoln can send against them. Such being the condition of the war, the French Emperor may justly ask whether Europe is to sit still and make no effort to save a civilized and Christian society from the miseries that are coming on it. The exhaustion of the country and the brutalizing of the people are the only results which may be clearly foreseen if the war lasts, and the Emperor will do a good work if by any wise and temperate advances he can persuade the Federals to desist from their hopeless enterprise.

Mexican Affairs in Spain—Important Debate.

The discussion on Mexican affairs was continued on the 10th in the Cortes.

Señor Olozaga, after stating that he considered Spain had not obtained a sufficient indemnity for the expenses of the expedition to Cochin China, censured Collantes for not having replied to Señor Mon on the subject of his conversation respecting the Archduke Maximilian having been put forward as a candidate by France. He stated that although Señor Collantes was aware, on Oct. 15, of this circumstance, the treaty was signed on the 20th without any protest on the part of Spain.

"It was the duty of Spain," he said, "to support the election of a Spanish Prince only." He expressed a hope that the Mexicans would eliminate Maximilian over foreign invasion.

Señor Olozaga further stated that Señor Collantes was perfectly aware of the schemes of Gen. Almonte, and that he ought to have given instructions to prevent the establishment of a monarchy in Mexico. He said that Spain had lost in Mexico 2,000,000 piasters and a great number of her soldiers, without obtaining any result; and considered that the Cabinet ought either to have disapproved the federalization of Gen. Paez and sent back troops to Mexico, or have tendered its resignation should circumstances have prevented it from so doing. After the return of Señor Mon from Paris, Señor Collantes ought not, in his opinion, have sent another Ambassador to Paris.

Señor Olozaga considered that the offer of the Emperor to again accept the aid of Spanish troops was a mere form, and thought that it would be patriotic to commence on the 1st of May, 1863, that day so fatal to Spain. He concluded by appealing to the Ministry to leave it to others to settle the questions now pending.

Señor Carnevas then spoke, and declared that although agreeing with the policy of the Cabinet in general, he did not concur with it on the Mexican question.

Financial and Commercial.

LONDON MONEY MARKET.

LONDON, Tuesday Evening, Jan. 13.

Consols dull, closing at 92¾ for money, and 92¾@93 for Feb. 5.

At the Bank to-day there was again a full demand for discounts.

French Rentes fell ¼; quoted 70f. 15c.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET—JAN. 12 AND 13.

The demand for Cotton has been moderate, and sales for the two days do not exceed 7,000 bales; 4,000 on speculation and for export. Prices steady.

LIVERPOOL CORN MARKET—JAN. 13.

Only a retail business was done in Wheat, but holders insisted on full prices. Flour was neglected, but without change in rates. Indian Corn attracted attention, and a good business was reported at from 2s. 3d. for inferior, and 30s. 6d. 2s. 3d. for prime mixed; white, 31s. @32s. 6d., and yellow.

LONDON CORN MARKET—JAN. 12.

Market dull, at rates of last week.

LONDON COLONIAL MARKET—JAN. 12.

Sugar easier. Coffee [illegible] Tallow quiet, at 48s. 6d. @48s. 9d.

LATEST COMMERCIAL.

LIVERPOOL, Wednesday, Jan. 14.

Cotton—Sales of the two days, 7,000 bales, including 4,000 bales to speculators and exporters. The market opened irregular and dull, but a reaction was occasioned by the American news, and the market closed at a more buoyant tone this morning.

Trade Report—At Manchester the market is firmer, especially for Saxonies.

BRADFORD—Wool quiet and steady. Worsteds steady. Corn firmer, and advanced 6d. @9d.

PROVISIONS—Beef heavy. Pork very dull. Bacon declining. Butter firm for fine. Lard steady. Tallow dull.

PRODUCE—Ashes dull. Sugar quiet. Coffee steady. Rice inactive. Rosin—no sales. Spirits Turpentine nominal.

LONDON, Tuesday, 13th—evening.

Consols 92¾ for money (good demand for discount at bank).

American stocks have advanced: United States Bires advanced ¼; Erie advanced ½; Illinois Central Shares advanced ½; Pennsylvania Bonds advanced ½.

The Navy and Its Mechanical Deficiencies.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In the TIMES of the 20th, "Vindex" complains that I attempt to attach his "grave accusations" contained in his communication of the 19th, "with verbal criticism of the minor points." Does "Vindex" mean that the discussion of the efficiency of the "cut-off" is a minor point, and that a plain statement of facts is merely verbal criticism? or does he mean that he says in his communication of the 19th, that "the merits of the Ericsson contest set in the finest of model, and in her power," and her superiority in that respect, by working steam economically, and using the best form of slide valve cut-off now known?" After this statement, he goes on to inform us that Mr. Isaiah Wood has published to the world, that the "cut-off" was of no advantage on steam vessels, and then says: "Of course, every one who ever paid the coal bills of a steam engine knows how utterly false this is." Does not this mean, Mr. Editor, that if the Ericsson had not a "cut-off," the best new known, she would be a failure, and that working steam expansively by an independent "cut-off" is the sole cause of her success; that Mr. Isaiah Wood has failed because he has not put these "cut-offs" in the sloops-of-war and the gunboats; and that every one who ever paid coal-bills for engines knows it to be so. But when I show, by facts which he or any one else who pleases can investigate for themselves, that large mills can be run just as economically without cutoffs as with them, "the premises" "Vindex" lays down for the foundation of his "grave accusations," then become mere minor points, and the facts disproving them mere verbal criticism.

The comparison "Vindex" undertakes to make between Messrs. Hickens' and the Brooklyn mill is sophistical; because, the statement that Messrs. Hickens' mills take more than fifty pounds of coal to grind a barrel of flour, and the Brooklyn mill "grinds a barrel with not less than twenty pounds of coal," leaves it to the reader's imagination to fix any number of pounds he chooses. For the purposes of this discussion I will imagine that the Brooklyn mill consumes less coal per barrel than the Hickens' mills; yet even this does not prove that its economy is due to its engine "having a cut-off, and a very large range of expansion." If the Messrs. Hickens had a beneficial to the success of their business to conduct their "milling" operations by a system requiring more power to grind a barrel of flour than the Brooklyn mill proprietors do, and if they use the power of the engines for other than "milling" purposes at the same time, then it is a commercial question for them to decide, and not one in relation to "cut-offs."

"Vindex" next takes exception that, because I showed by making the strongest extract condemning the use of "cut-offs" to be found in Mr. Isaiah Wood's book, (to which he referred and made a basis for his attack on him,) and remarked that he (Isaiah Wood) "only condemned certain complicated kinds, which he had found practically and experimentally to be useless over and above the more simple ones." This he charges "is a mere trick of words." Why is "Vindex" compelled to change his ground on account of a mere trick of words, and make a garbled quotation from a report (not Isaiah Wood's) of a Board of Chief Engineers, appointed by the Secretary of the Navy, to investigate experimentally the value of "cut-offs," who, after long and patient experiments on the engine (with a "Sickles cut-off" attached) of a naval steamer, reported in effect that they were useless appendages to steam engines?

I think it pertinent in this connection to remark, that three members of this Board commenced this investigation with quite as strong opinions in favor of "cut-offs" as "Vindex" has, but came out of it very much in the condition we might suppose the "carrions" would in "Vindex" imaginary race with Fleet Footed. Why don't he stick to his text, which was that Isaiah Wood had "published a book (the only one he had ever seen,) in which every material proposition is demonstrably false." Give us the proof, "Vindex," and don't set up your dictum to prove that Isaiah Wood is "unsupported by men of recognized knowledge in the world, and sets in the face of notorious indisputable facts to the contrary."

"Vindex" charges me with making a false issue, by showing that the best engineering talent in the world has adopted the slide valve as the best. He says he knows that poppet valves are the best, but he don't tell us how he knows it; therefore, we must suppose the best engineering talent in the world are ignorants compared with him. But let us look a little into the matter of this false issue and see how true the charge is. "Vindex" says, "I said nothing against the use of slide valves!" What does it mean when he says he has ascertained the particulars of the failure of four sloops-of-war built by Mr. Isaiah Wood—the Oneida, Juniata, Monongahela, and Lackawanna. "The Oneida's valves, made for simplicity, so cut by their own action as to be unfit for use;" the Juniata "has cut her valves so as to be unfit for service;" the Monongahela "has cut her steam valves so that she is unfit for use"; and the Lackawanna, "she has not yet made her trial trip, but, as she is just like all the others, no doubt she will have the same fate." Now, here are four vessels, all having slide valves, which have failed (according to "Vindex") because, not what the Independent "cut-off" would have saved them, (for it could in no possible way as a cut-off do it,) but because the builders of the engines have failed to put the proper metal in the cylinders, or valves, or both—not willfully, but in consequence of not having sufficient experience in building large slide valve engines; and "Vindex" knows it, if he has a tithe of the knowledge about steam engineering he professes to have. I make a false issue, indeed! I deny it, and hurl back the accusation. I charge him with making a false issue, by calling these sloops-of-war failures, because of their engines not having independent "cut-offs."

"Vindex" asserts: "A good cut-off engine uses only less than two and a quarter pounds" of coal per horse power. "A short—a requires more than forty per cent, more coal to do it, and that it will make no material difference, whether an independent "cut-off" is attached or not on engines properly proportioned to do their work." Here is the issue broadly stated. If "Vindex" wishes to discuss it, he has the initiative, but he must confine himself to facts, and not to theories and false comparisons.

"The independent "cut-off" will never make fast ships, for the conditions necessary to make them are founded on truths, not fallacies." The Independent "cut-off" is a fallacy, and the sophyte who depends upon it must fail.

CRUCIS.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 22, 1863.

OBITUARY.

—Rev. JOHN T. COLT, died at Albion, N. Y., on Jan. 23. He was a native of Buffalo; graduated at Yale College in 1844; pursued his theological studies at Andover and Auburn; spent some time in Europe, and upon his return, took charge of St. Peter's Presbyterian Church, in Rochester, whence he was called to a Presbyterian Church at Albion, where he preached for five years, and then accepted a call to fill again the same pulpit in Rochester which he had formerly occupied. He had arranged to exchange with Rev. Mr. Nesmith, at Albion, the Sunday preceding his death, but on entering the pulpit, was suddenly and violently attacked with inflammation of the lungs, which terminated fatally.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

The Drowning Accident on the Newark and Hackensack Railroad.

CORONER'S INVESTIGATION—BODY OF THE UNKNOWN BOY IDENTIFIED.

An inquest was summoned before Coroner DONNELLY, at Hudson City, Monday, when the following evidence was taken:

Samuel D. Harris, sworn—I reside in Newark, and am a cast and blind maker; was on the train with the engineer on Saturday morning that left Newark at 8 o'clock; was on the engine, standing on the fireman's side, when it was precipitated into the river. Cars were about twenty feet from the draw when I noticed that it was off; the whistle did not blow until we arrived at the bridge tender's house; I then talked with the engineer before; every time I went down with him he shut off the steam at about the same place he did on Saturday; I saw a light in the engine; passed it; saw the engineer step on the fireman's side as soon as he shut off steam and look out of the window, and suppose he was looking for the signal; John Vinson, the fireman, and myself and the engineer were on the locomotive; think you cannot see the signal on the engineer's side of the locomotive; think there is a mistake in the road which prevents the engineer from seeing the signal; have stated the engineer say previous to this occurrence, that the light was not arranged as it should be, and it was very difficult for him to see it, and if they did not arrive at it thought there would be an accident some time or other; when the engine went into the river the fireman was on the tender, in the act of putting on the brake; I went down to the river with the foreman of the police. When I first got to the river, the cars were about twenty feet from the bridge; did not see anybody after such the draw; a man might have been there and I not see him; but think if there had been he would have been likely to have seen him; the engineer blowed the whistle, as though he apprehended danger, and tried to reverse the engine; there was about fifty pounds of steam on; have never noticed the engineer to blow the whistle in that neighborhood before; he always shut off the steam when he approached the bridge; after I saw that the bridge was open, I stepped upon the tender, and as the locomotive went down I was thrown against the boiler; neither the engineer or Vinson made any effort to get off; do not know whether the fireman jumped off or not; as soon as I got to the top of the water I tried to swim toward the end of the draw, but the tide was against me, and a boat finally came, and I was rescued; think the engineer and Vinson were drowned, as they did not make any effort to save themselves; the former had hold of the throttle and the lever when the locomotive went down; have known the engineer about three years, and have never seen him intoxicated; the train was running at the usual speed.

Charles W. Rodgers testified—I reside in Newark, and am a male nurse in Park-row, New-York; was on the train that left Newark on Saturday at 8 A. M.; was sitting some five seats from the front door in the passenger car; the train was laboring; I took out my watch; noticed the time, for I intended to down the second blast; seemed to be cut off suddenly; I did not know we were on the bridge, but supposed we were near the crossing on the Elm track, where they always blow to brake up; almost instantly there was a crash of the passenger and baggage car coming together, and the end of the passenger car was stove in; I supposed we were off the track with the steam cut off, and the lever reversed; I rose from my seat and walked toward the rear, when I perceived a sudden jerk; we brought the baggage car and the end of the coupling and dropped off the end of the brakes; the rear brakeman came in and said we were on the end of the bridge, and advised us to jump off, as something had given way; stepped off on the bridge, when I saw some persons in the water, crying for help; saw the baggage car floating off with some persons clinging to it, but it was so dark I could not distinguish one from another, or how many there were; almost one in the water called for a boat; it occurred to me that there might be a house there, and I started for the bridge-tender's house, and went as far as the bridge, was well shaked and then stopped for fear of falling through; I called loudly for a boat and rope several times; then a man came out of the bridge-tender's house who, I supposed, was the bridge-tender; he had nothing on but a shirt and pantaloons and was barefooted; I asked if there was a boat; he said there was one on the pier; by the draw; the man then went and jumped down on the pier; just at that time I saw a yawl known over from the pier; then looked up and saw the signal burning for the first time; had not thought about it or looked for it until this time; which was about five minutes after I got out of the car; the bridge-tender's wife was on the bridge at this time; she said the bridge was left open every night after the last train passes over; the brakeman came to me with his lamp and asked me to go with him; we walked down together to the north end of the bridge; we had not proceeded far before we discovered two persons struggling through the mud and rushes; one of them was the fireman and the other was a passenger; the brakeman returned with them, and I took the lantern and continued on down the river, but could find no other person; came opposite the floating wreck of the baggage car and called repeatedly, but could get no answer; a man named Skillman hallooed from the opposite side of the river and asked if we had any one; he proceeded to the bridge-tender's house, and told the conductor, Mr. Havens, I should return to Newark; the conductor requested me to have a locomotive and car sent up; I left about seven o'clock; after going about three-fourths of a mile I overtook a man, apparently a laborer; in conversation he said he was coming up to get some whisky for the men that were wet; this was the first that I knew that he had been where the accident occurred; I said, "It is a sad accident, and I think the bridge-tender must have been asleep;" he replied, "It don't do for a man in such a position to be broken of his rest at eight up with a house full until 11 or 12 o'clock at night." I arrived at the Morris and Essex Depot shortly before 9 o'clock; delivered the message and then went home; the signal light was burning very dim, and do not think it could be seen across the river; two passengers, the brakeman and myself were the only persons I saw on the end of the bridge, with the exception of the man that came out of the house with pants on and barefooted.

The other testimony taken was corroborative of the above. The fireman's body was discovered; nothing new was elicited, and, shortly after 5 P. M., the inquest was adjourned until to-day, when additional evidence will be introduced.

The body of the boy, who was partially dressed in soldier's clothes, and upon which the inquest is being held, was identified by his uncle, THOMAS CHILSON, as that of THOMAS MALLOW. The deceased was an orphan boy; his father having lost his life in the army. He resided in Newark, and had recently obtained employment in New-York. Mr. Armstrong, of the firm of Ward, Armstrong & Co., has kindly undertook the necessary for a respectable funeral, to be furnished at the expense of the Company.

JUDGE OGDEN REQUIRES AN INVESTIGATION.

Yesterday afternoon, in the Hudson County Court, Judge Ogden sent for the Grand Jury, then in session, and called their attention to the railroad drawbridge accident. He said it was their duty to investigate the whole affair thoroughly; and inquire into all the facts of the case; and if any person was found guilty of negligence, to find a bill against them. The Judge also explained under what circumstances the Railroad Company would be made liable for damages.

The Bedford-street Church Scandal.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Judge McCunn.

The case of JOHN B. FERGUSON, indicted for obtaining $1,000 from ELIZABETH C. CARTER, by false pretences, was resumed in this Court Monday morning. As on the previous days, a large audience was present, including many members of the Bedford-street Church, and quite a number of ladies.

The testimony for the defence was resumed by calling to the stand Mr. F. Halstead, who testified that he had known Mr. Ferguson thirty or forty years; knew the farm that he owned in Westchester County, and considered it worth, in 1860, at the time Mr. Ferguson sold it, $18,000; never knew or heard anything against Mr. Ferguson's character before this occurrence.

Cross-examined—Don't know what Ferguson paid for the farm, nor to whom he sold it, nor how much it was encumbered.

John Van Wagner, sworn—Am a house and land agent; have been in the business ten years; acted as agent for Mr. Ferguson in the sale of the house in Forty-third-street; it was sold on the 6th of April, 1860, for $2,850; was also agent for the defendant to sell his house No. 48 Carmine-street, in the February previous; I asked for the house $3,500; think I could have sold it for that sum, but Mr. Ferguson subsequently concluded not to sell; I also acted as agent for the sale of Ferguson's house in Pacific-street, Brooklyn; negotiated an exchange for the property with a man from Pennsylvania, but Mr. Ferguson backed out of the bargain.

Cross-examined—The Carmine-street house was worth, in 1861 and 1862, $7,000, in my judgment; Mr. Ferguson received $100 down for the Forty-third-street house, and $1,400 the 1st of May following, and took a mortgage for the balance.

The defence here rested their case, and the prosecution recalled to the stand, as rebutting testimony for the People, Mr. Jas. H. Keene, who testified that Mr. Ferguson told him that the Carmine-street house brought $3,500 on the foreclosure of John McLean's mortgage.

Cross-examined—It was in my store that Mr. Ferguson told me this, and it was within twelve days after the Church Arbitration Committee rendered their decision; I never owned a foot of real estate in this City.

Counsel for the defence then called John McLean, to show that he offered to Mrs. Carter, at the Church trial, to keep the Carmine-street property and give her the proceeds of all the property he could be paid for in the meantime, above his claim; Mr. McLean was called and testified as above.

Cross-examined—I made this offer at the first hearing before the Church Committee; my claim was $5,500; I never had an offer from Ferguson that covered my claim; the sale of the house took place in 1861; I commenced my proceedings in chancery, 1861; there was only one sale; I did the main of the property, which was much [illegible]; I did tell [illegible]; my mortgage was part [illegible] Ferguson, and part of a second mortgage which was occupied by Mr. Ferguson's [illegible]; I do not know when I took the mortgage; that Mr. Ferguson owed Mrs. Carter anything.

Mr. Keene recalled again for the prosecution, and testified that Mr. McLean offered before the Church Committee to hold the property a year; a member of the church authorized me to offer to take the property from Mr. McLean, pay all the expenses on it, provided the McLeans would make a deed for it at the end of five years. Mr. McLean refused the offer.

Mrs. Carter recalled—Did not hear Mr. McLean make the offer at the church meeting; he afterward told me that he would foreclose the mortgage and sell the property, so I could get my money; he said that he did know when he took his mortgage on the Carmine-street house; that there was another mortgage on the property.

Mr. McLean was recalled, and said that he never told Mrs. Carter that he did not know when he took his mortgage; that there was another mortgage on the Carmine-street house; on the contrary, he told her that he did know there was such a mortgage; witness also contradicted other statements of Mrs. Carter.

The testimony here closed, and Mr. SOLOMON L. HERZ, for the defence, combated my license to the jury. He spoke for over two hours, making an able and powerful argument in behalf of his client. He took great issue on the fact that Mrs. Carter did not pretend to say, some time ago, representations were made to her by Mr. Ferguson in order to obtain the loan such more than ten years afterward; that even as late as last Spring, when the first related her grievances to the Church Committee, she did not pretend that any representations were made by Ferguson when he borrowed the money, except about the sale of a house in Forty-third-street; he said, when complaint was made to the Committee, he claimed that the whole idea of charging false representations upon Mr. Ferguson was an afterthought, got up at the suggestion of Mr. Keene, who had played the part of Iago in the case from the beginning, and through whose suggestion it had been brought before a criminal Court. The truth was, he said, that the loan was made at the instance of Mrs. Carter herself, who volunteered it; and that even if the representations charged had been made by Mr. Ferguson, his subsequent conduct in giving her another mortgage on the property showed that he had no intention to cheat her out of the money, and therefore he could not be convicted of this offence, the very essence of which consisted in the intent to cheat.

At the conclusion of Mr. HERZ's argument, the Court adjourned to 11 o'clock Tuesday morning, when Mr. STEWART will sum up for the People, and the case will be given to the jury under the charge of the Court.

TUESDAY, Jan. 27.

At the opening of the Court, this morning, Mr. O. L. STEWART, Assistant District-Attorney, commenced summing up the case for the prosecution. He spoke for nearly three hours, reviewing the testimony in detail, and strenuously urging a conviction of the defendant. He did not wish, he said, in conclusion, to see the old man sent to the State Prison, and with the present Judge who sat on the bench, who was so well known to lean to the side of mercy, there was no danger that the prisoner would get a more severe punishment than he deserved. The statute had been wisely framed to suit just such cases as this, and had left the discretion of the Court whether the penalty in case of conviction, should be imprisonment in the State Prison, or a mere nominal fine. But it was due to the complainant in this case, who was a poor old woman, and had been cheated out of her all by the defendant, that restitution should be made, and if the friends of the prisoner, who appeared to be numerous and wealthy, would aid him in making such restitution, he had no doubt the punishment inflicted by the Court would be light.

CHARGE OF THE CHIEF JUDGE.

Judge McCUNN charged the jury as follows: "I congratulate you on our arrival at this point in this case. I myself have felt very unwell from the time it was first started up to the present hour. I will be very brief in my remarks. The case has been ably argued by counsel on both sides, and perhaps my remarks would not bring any more light to the subject than has been brought by the skill and arguments of able counsel. This, gentlemen, is an ordinary case of false pretences, and yet it is an extraordinary case. It is a case in which you may perceive the church has taken a deep interest. A case I will be leave to say should have been settled before it reached the threshold of this Court. It is, however, consolation to know that to this unfortunate case this great commotion is a case of this kind, where the brethren in the church cannot settle their affairs amicably, it can come here and be considered by twelve men unbiassedly and fairly, and that a just and an honest conclusion can be arrived at.

"There are three facts, gentlemen, in this case which you have to find, and on those three facts will hang your verdict. The first is, Was the money loaned? I believe there is no question about that at all. The money was loaned beyond peradventure. The next fact is, Was the money loaned on those representations, as sworn to by Mrs. CARTER? And the third fact is, Were those representations false, and were they intended to cheat and defraud her out of that thousand dollars? I believe I am now stating the case to you as fairly to the prisoner as I possibly can. These are the facts you have to find. The first is, whether he obtained the money, and after you find that fact that the money was loaned, you must go further and find whether the representations were made before the loaning of the money, for if you find they were not made before the loaning of the money you must there stop and render a verdict of acquittal. If you find, however, the representations were made, you must go further—you must find whether they were false and untrue, and whether they were made with the intention to defraud Mrs. CARTER out of the thousand dollars. In arriving at a just conclusion in this case you are to take into consideration all the surrounding circumstances. A great deal of evidence has been placed before you about certain mortgages. It is almost conceded on the part of the defence, gentlemen, that if the representations were made by the defendant, as sworn to by Mrs. CARTER, and he (not at his house in Jones-street, that they were untrue, because at the time that the representations were made it was admitted that there was a mortgage of $3,500 on the place in Carmine-street, and I believe there has been no effort on the part of the counsel for the defence to show that Ferguson was worth twenty or twenty-two thousand dollars over and above all his debts, so that really the only fact you have to find in this case is, whether at the time he borrowed the money, the defendant in the [illegible] represented to Mrs. CARTER that he owned the house and lot in Carmine-street, free and clear, and that he was worth twenty or twenty-two thousand dollars over and above all his debts. There has been a great deal of evidence given on both sides, touching irrelevant matters, that I think you have nothing to do with. I think you have nothing to do with those mortgages given after the transaction. The prosecution contends that the mortgages show an aggravation of the crime on the part of Ferguson. They show a desire on his part to get this money and appropriate the same to his own use, and prevent Mrs. Carter from getting it by a legal process in course of civil law. The other side contends that the giving of the mortgages show an honest intent on the part of Ferguson, and that he did not intend to cheat and defraud Mrs. CARTER out of the money when he borrowed the same. But the simple question for you to determine as I said before is, whether at the time this money was borrowed on or before the 26th or 28th of March, 1860, Ferguson said to Mrs. CARTER that he owned the house and lot No. 48 Carmine-street free and clear, and that he was worth twenty or twenty-two thousand dollars over and above all his debts. Now you will remember the statement of Mrs. CARTER. It was given collectively and apparently in a fair and candid manner. Given well for a woman of her years; and then you will remember also the testimony given on the part of the defendant, of his good character, and of his long standing in the community, where he resided.

All this evidence goes to take on lights to guide you to an honest and just conclusion in this case. I have made it my duty at all times, and deem it my duty at this time, to give the prisoner the benefit of a reasonable doubt in your minds, a doubt not engendered by any sickly sentiment or craven shrinking from a painful responsibility, but such a doubt as honest men looking facts in the face with a view to understand and set upon those facts may rightfully entertain, the prisoner is entitled to the benefit of those doubts. If, on the other hand, after a careful examination of the evidence, you believe the people have sustained the charge laid in the indictment, you owe a great duty to your own consciences, your country and your God, and I am quite sure you will faithfully discharge it. I do not know that I can say anything more to enlighten you on the facts of the case. The testimony is long, as you will remember. It has taken a period of four days to try the case. Perhaps it would not have taken so long, and I enforced strict rule in admitting or excluding evidence. You are to look at the testimony of Mrs. CARTER about these representations. She may have been mistaken in her estate, or may have stated that which is not true and unfair, as the trial, notwithstanding my remarks on her behalf. You are to look at the witnesses in the case and look at their testimony, and see whether, at the time Mrs. CARTER loaned the money, those representations were made, and, if so, whether they were true or false, and for what purpose they were made, and from all the circumstances in detailed before the Court, you are to be guided to a just conclusion in the premises."

The Jury retired, a little after 3, and came into Court a few minutes after 9, with a verdict of guilty, accompanied with a strong recommendation to the mercy of the Court. His Honor remanded the prisoner for sentence until Saturday, and stated that if he expected mercy from the hands of the Court he should at once replace the thousand dollars this poor woman loaned him, as the first act toward the satisfaction of the act.

The Court then adjourned till Saturday morning.

Obsequies of Lieut.-Commander Gwin.

Few but those immediately interested can comprehend the weight of woe conveyed in these nine lines from yesterday morning's death notices in the TIMES:

GWIN—On Saturday, Jan. 3, from wounds received in the action of Dec. 27, 1862, before Haines' Bluff, Lieut.-Commander WILLIAM GWIN, U. S. N., of the gunboat Benton, in the 21st year of his age.

The funeral will take place at Zion Church, corner of Madison-avenue and Thirty-eighth-street, at 11 o'clock, on Tuesday morning, Jan. 27. The friends of the [illegible] Committee, and the Board adjourned until the 5th inst., at 3 P. M.

INDICTMENTS FOUND BY THE GRAND JURY.—The Grand Jury of the Kings County Court of Over and Terminer sent in this Court with 37 indictments on Monday. The offences are classified as follows: Burglary, 11; manslaughter, 9; false pretences, 3; forgery, 3; assault with intent to kill, 1; bigamy, 1; embezzlement, 2; felonious assault, 1; felony, 1; keeping a house of ill fame, 1; selling liquor without license, 1; grand larceny, 2; assault and battery, 6; disorderly house, 1; receiving stolen goods, 1. All these cases are triable in the Court of Sessions, which will sit on the 2d day of February next.

NEW-JERSEY.

THE RAILROAD DRAW-BRIDGE ACCIDENT.—THE BUSINESS AND RAILROAD COMPANY CHARGED.—THE CALL BEFORE THE GRAND JURY.—The inquest on the bodies of THOMAS MALLOWS and PATRICK GALLAGER, victims of the railroad draw-bridge accident on the Newark and Hoboken Road, was resumed before Coroner DOUGLAS and Justice ALDRIDGE, in Hudson City, at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, and resulted in a verdict of censure against the engineer and the owners of the road. The matter will come before the Grand Jury today for investigation. The evidence taken appears to exculpate the bridge-tender from all blame.

VERDICT.

The jury rendered a verdict that the said PATRICK GALLAGHER and CHARLES MALLOWS came to their death by drowning, in the Hackensack River, on the morning of Jan. 26, 1863. That said drowning was caused by the precipitation of a locomotive and baggage car, of the Newark and Hoboken Railroad Company, in which said PATRICK GALLAGHER and CHARLES MALLOWS were the firemen and passengers, through the open draw of the Hackensack bridge into the river. Whereby said PATRICK GALLAGHER and CHARLES MALLOWS were there and then suffocated and drowned, and the jurors on their oaths, do say that the said accident was caused by the gross carelessness and neglect of the engineer, (WOMBURN) in charge of the locomotive at the time, and they censure the Newark and Hoboken Railroad Company for allowing the driver of said bridge, to be off at night, and for their neglect in not having at least two men stationed at the bridge to prevent accidents during such absences."

The bodies of the other two firemen reported to have been drowned have never been recovered. There is a possibility that the engineer may have murdered them, and so was guilty of negligence, but secreted himself.

JERSEY CITY AND NEW-YORK.—The beautiful new model ferryboat Jersey City has commenced running between Jersey City and New-York, and the attentions of her build and the specious accommodation she affords to passengers have been the theme of much commendation and satisfactory remarks and colony by those who have crossed from New-York to the New-Jersey shore. She is remarkably well suited up in every department, and her appearance is excellent on the river. The latest improvements have been carried out upon her. Her engines were constructed at the large and extensive foundry establishment of Mr. JOHN COWELL in Jersey City, and they do that gentleman and Mr. GEORGE BURNHAM, Jr., Mr. COWELL's able superintendent, every credit. They also add much to the high and well-earned reputation which Mr. COWELL has already so justly earned. A second new ferryboat is in course of construction, and will be ready early in July next, for the same ferry. By this it appears that Mr. COWELL, the popular superintendent of the ferry, has determined that it shall sustain its high character which it has so honorably borne since it was first established. This second boat will be called the City of New-York, an honor intended for the Empire City. The Mr. COWELL above referred to is the builder of the famous Ericsson iron-plad battery the Weehawken, which so successfully silenced Capt. RODGERS' weathered the storm in her passage to Fortress Monroe, by which she has obtained an excellent reputation.

ARREST FOR AN OLD BURGLARY.—Officers LANE and BECKER, of the Newark constabulary police, on Monday night arrested at a burglars' haunt in Bexter-street, in this City, a man named JOHN ADAM MYER, alias "Dutch Jack," for being concerned with others in a burglary at the residence of Hon. NATHANIEL PERRY, at Newark, on the night of the 29th of November, 1861. MYER and HOFFMAN, another party implicated, escaped, and subsequently enlisted, HOFFMAN being killed at the battle of Antietam. MYER recently deserted, and word being sent to the officers above named, they concluded to search his old haunts, which they had penetrated when in quest of him immediately after the robbery. They were fortunately successful, and arrested him as stated, much to his astonishment. MYER was charged yesterday under the old indictment in the Oyer and Terminer at Newark, and pleaded not guilty. A part of the gang are now serving terms in State Prison for this and other burglaries. This gang has robbed several churches, including the Catholic Church in William-street, Newark, and a church in Hudson City.

CONVOCATION OF CLERGY.—A convocation of Episcopal clergy will be held in Christ Church, Newark, next week, beginning on Tuesday evening, and continuing through Wednesday. The convocation will be composed of the clergy of Newark and vicinity, and of parts of Middlesex and Monmouth Counties. The services will be public. On Tuesday evening, Rev. Prof. MARAH, of the General Theological Seminary, New-York, will deliver a sermon to the clergy. On Wednesday evening, the important subject of Diocesan Missions will be considered, and an address will be delivered by Bishop ODENHEIMER upon the importance of the work. These convocations are rare events, this being the first that has been held in East Jersey since the early days of the late misunderstanding. Bishop DOUGLAS has taken hold of the work of Diocesan Missions with great energy, and notwithstanding an unfortunate difference of opinion in respect to the proper conduct of the work, which prevents unity of action between the High and Low Church branches in the State, he is making much for the establishment and support of Church missionary stations at destitute points.

THE "OYSTER WAR" CASE.—We noticed a few days since the arrest of four persons from New-York, by the Sheriff of Monmouth County, New-Jersey, while in attendance upon the United States District Court at Trenton, as witnesses in a case of alleged piracy. The arrest was for unlawfully taking for clams in the waters of Raritan Bay, New-Jersey. Yesterday they were brought before Judge HAINES, at Newark, on a writ of habeas corpus, and their discharge claimed by their counsel, A. Q. KEASBEY, Esq., upon the ground that the Sheriff of Monmouth had no power to make the arrests in Mercer County. The process directing the Sheriff to seize the defendants commanded him to take them to any county of the State. The counsel for the Sheriff, J. D. BEAM, Esq., of Freehold, at the close of the argument announced that a new process was in the hands of the Sheriff of Essex, authorizing their arrest in case the first should be declared unlawful. Judge HAINES will give his decision on Monday afternoon next.

THE HOBOKEN AND NEWARK RAILROAD ACCIDENT.—In the accident at the Hackensack Bridge on the above road, four persons were drowned, viz.: JOHN WOMBURN, engineer, MATTHIAS GALLAGER, fireman, THOMAS MALLOWS and JOHN VINCE. A singular fatality seems to have attended the family of young MALLOWS. A few weeks since his father was killed at Newark, by a runaway horse; then an aunt, with whom he had taken refuge, died, leaving him in the cold cheerless of the world, without home or friends. He had just succeeded in obtaining employment, the man who employed him being one of those drowned with him at the time of the sad casualty on the above railroad. His funeral took place at Newark, yesterday afternoon, the railroad company assuming all the expense.

FUNERAL OF COMMANDER GWYN.—The passage of the funeral cortege of the late lamented Commander GWYN, through the streets of Newark, yesterday, was marked by many tokens of tender respect for the ashes of a dead hero. Flags were displayed at half-mast from many public and private buildings, and crowds of people gathered in the streets, gazing mutely upon the sad procession as it wended its way to the silent city of the dead. The body of stalwart blue-jacketed tars, and the marines which accompanied the hearse as a guard of honor, were followed by a long line of carriages, filled with naval officers in full uniform, and the family and friends of the deceased. The remains were interred in the family lot of Hon. NATHANIEL HAYWARD, Esq., the father-in-law, in Mount Pleasant Cemetery, near Newark.

THE FERRYBOAT JERSEY CITY.—This fine boat, which is probably the largest ferryboat ever constructed, has been placed regularly upon the Jersey City and Cortlandt-street Ferry. She is 219 feet in length, 38 feet beam, 12 feet deep, and 650 tons burden, is solid 20 feet at both ends, and the sides are planked with white oak three inches thick. The cabins are commodious, and are lighted with two chandeliers in each. They are also well ventilated, by means of open scroll work near the ceiling.

FIRE IN A HOTEL.—Yesterday morning about 3 o'clock, a fire was discovered at the large hotel known as the NEWARK HOUSE, situated at the five corners in Hudson City. The fire originated from the heater under the bar-room, and had been smouldering for some time, but gained headway slowly for the lack of ventilation. It was soon extinguished by the Fire Department. The building belongs to the Smith estate, and was occupied by JOHN J. RIKER. Damage to the building about $600. Mr. RIKER's loss on fixtures about $400; no insurance.

FIRE AND COAL.—Yesterday, in the House of Assembly, at Trenton, Mr. EMMONS, (Dem.,) of Bergen, offered resolutions against the Emancipation Proclamation, declaring it null and void, &c. Mr. DEAN, (Rep.,) of Essex, offered resolutions reaffirming the strong Union resolutions adopted at the last session of the Legislature, when the Democratic Party was more patriotic than now. Both sets were referred.

ATTEMPT TO BLOW OPEN A SAFE.—Some time between Saturday night and Monday morning, Mr. CORNELL's office, corner Erie street and Paterson-street, Jersey City, was broken open, and an unsuccessful attempt was made to blow open the safe with powder. For this purpose, a hole had been drilled into the safe, and powder had been poured in, but for some reason it did not cause an explosion. The Police, however, have suspicious looking fellows loitering in that vicinity about 4 o'clock in the morning, who took their flight readily. On their persons were found a crowbar, and bit, a small pocket of powder, a loaded pistol, brass knuckles, &c. Recorder MAXWELL committed the man to the City Prison to await examination.

THE JERSEY CITY AND BERGEN POINT RAILROAD.—Our attention was attracted a few days since in regard to the paragraph stating that an injunction had been served on the above named company, restraining them from using dummy engines over the road. This matter has been confounded with some letters in regard to the plank road. Experiments tried with the dummy engines have been made over the road during the past week, and have been very satisfactory to those that have witnessed and rode over the track. Freighters hence have been tried, and it is found that they pay no more attention to the road than do the ordinary cars.

A FAITHFUL JUSTICE.—A Democratic Justice of the Peace, named JOHN ROSS, was yesterday placed upon trial in the Essex County Court, charged with keeping a disorderly house, at his premises in South Market-street, near Jackson-street, Newark. The Justice keeps a grocery shop in the same room in which he exercises his functions as conservator of the public peace—a rather incongruous mixing of vocations. Justice ROSS was before the last term of Court, upon a charge of accepting bribes from parties brought before him in his capacity as Justice.

ATTEMPT TO PASS A COUNTERFEIT $100 BILL.—A well dressed, quiet looking young man, called at Lamb's cigar shop, office, in Jersey City on Monday morning, and attempted to pass a $100 counterfeit bill, of the Shoe and Leather Bank, New-York, upon the Clerk, JAMES MCKEAN. Mr. MCKEAN at once detected the counterfeit, arrested the young man, and Recorder MAXWELL committed him for the action of the Grand Jury.

RAILROAD EXCURSION.—The city officials of Jersey City, Hudson City, and members of the Legislature, will make an excursion over the Jersey City and Bergen Point Railroad on Saturday next, for the purpose of testing the practicability of using dummy engines as a propelling power from the top of the hill to Bergen Point.

UNITED STATES HOSPITAL, NEWARK.—The report for the week ending Jan. 24, shows: Employed, 7; returned to duty, 1; discharged, 4; deserted, 3; Remaining, 678. Lieut. G. G. BARNES, First New-Jersey, arrived on the 24th. On Monday ninety-five soldiers have left, as furlough men, to rejoin their respective regiments.

AN ERROR CORRECTED.—In the TIMES, a few days ago, among the names of appointees confirmed appeared that of WILLIAM BEST, as Consul to Hong Kong. Mr. BEST goes to San Juan, and not to Hong Kong, the Consulate to which place is now occupied by Gen. H. N. COWLES, Esq., formerly editor of the Newark Daily Mercury.

THE SEVENTH NEW-JERSEY REGIMENT.—The Seventh New-Jersey Regiment have just forwarded to MARCUS L. WARD, Esq., through Rev. JULIUS ROSS, D. D., Chaplain of the Regiment, the very handsome sum of $12,000 for distribution to their families.

BURNS SUPPER.—The Burns Club of Jersey City celebrated the anniversary of the birth of ROBERT BURNS, by a supper last evening, at RAE's Atlantic Hotel.

NEW-JERSEY MEDICAL SOCIETY.—The ninety-seventh annual meeting of the New-Jersey Medical Society will be held to-day, (Wednesday,) at Lyceum Hall, in Jersey City.

In the Oyer and Terminer, the jury in the case of THOMAS REDER, indicted for manslaughter, came into Court about 7 o'clock on Saturday night, with a verdict of guilty, with a recommendation of the prisoner to the mercy of the Court. The jury were out two days.

REPORT OF INTERMENTS IN NEWARK.—The report of interments in Newark, for the week ending January 24, shows a total of 35, of whom 24 were under ten years of age.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge Betts.

The United States vs. The Schooner Mary Barker and her Cargo.—This was an application for a commission of sale. The vessel was libeled March 19, 1862, as a prize condemned to the United States, appeared to contest the suit for the vessel. A claimant appeared for 17 cases of cigars, forming part of the cargo, and contested the forfeiture. The Court was occupied two days in the hearing, and written arguments were also put in. On May 26 the vessel and cargo were condemned, but the decree was not pronounced for signature till July 29, 1862.

Mr. Upton was retained and appeared in the cause as counsel for the De Sota. The officers of the United States schooner Kittatinny, claiming to be captors, or at least joint captors with the De Sota, an appearance was entered for them by Benedict, Burr & Benedict, who appeared for them and conducted the proceedings before the Prize Commissioners and also in Court on the hearing on the merits, although they took no part in the oral argument of the case.

After the decree of condemnation, it was, as usual, referred to the Prize Commissioners to report by what vessels the capture was made, and on Oct. 15, 1862, on that report coming in, the Court entered that the De Sota and Kittatinny be deemed to be joint captors, and that the proceeds be distributed accordingly, and "that all costs and disbursements therein adjusted and determined by the Court, as allowed and allotted in this suit by the proper Department, be paid out of the proceeds prior to distribution."

The vessel and cargo were sold. The proceeds of the vessel, $800, were paid into the registry of the Court on July 8.

The proceeds of the cargo, $43,767 78, were paid by the Marshal directly into the Treasury, on Dec. 10, 1862. On Aug. 2, the District Attorney presented his bill of costs to the Judge for taxation. On Sept. 12, the Prize Commissioners presented theirs. On Sept. 27, Mr. Upton presented his. The Marshal's bill, as to the vessel, was taxed by the Clerk Aug. 13, and approved by the Court Nov. 16. His bill as to the cargo was taxed by the Clerk and approved by the Court Dec. 15. The Clerk's bill was taxed Dec. 4.

The bills were taxed at the following sums:

District Attorney's fees	$760 00
Prize Commissioners'	272 00
Counsel for the De Sota	645 00
Marshal's (as to cargo)	5,267 62
Marshal's (as to vessel)	426 62
Clerk	61 40
Total	$8,372 64

The District Attorney gave notice of the taxation of his costs to Mr. Upton, and received notice of taxation from the other parties. But none of the parties gave any notice of taxation to the counsel for the Kittatinny, who, learning for the first time in January, that the costs had been taxed, applied for a relaxation of the above bills, and for a taxation of their own bill. They had no actual notice of the entry of the decree of Oct. 12.

The motion was resisted by the District Attorney and counsel for the De Sota, on the ground that the matter was out of the authority of the Court, the proceedings being terminated. They did not object to the relaxation if the Court had any power over the fund.

Held by the Court—That no costs were allowed on the taxation by the Court, except upon the express assent of the counsel representing the litigants, and no item forbidden by the law was sanctioned by the Court. But it is palpable that the aggregate amount is large, and that many charges were allowed upon evidence which the captors, represented by the proceeds, would rightfully be entitled to discredit by cross-examination or other testimony, had application been made in time therefor.

That the present motion must be denied, inasmuch as all judicial power over the matter by this Court is determined, and no adequate relief can be afforded the prominent parties unless by revoking the final decrees rendered in the cause, the last of which was signed and recorded in October last.

That the counsel engaged in the suit as co-actors with the District Attorney, must be deemed co-plaintiffs of the proceedings common to all parties in progress before the Court up to the termination of the suit, and of the legal necessity of having their own costs taxed and embraced within the decree of the Court, so also to oppose any improper allowances to other parties participant in the restitution of such decrees; and that, accordingly, no error of irregularity was committed by the Court in signing the decrees.

That it is not to be overlooked that since the Act and joint resolution of Congress of July 17, 1862, the Court has no longer the function of taking charge of prize proceeds, or of disbursing them, nor of fixing the sum of costs payable out of them, except in the special instance of consent for captors; but that, on the contrary, the proceeds go in gross into the Treasury, and the costs of the Marshal, District-Attorney and Prize Commissioners are paid from the Treasury under the restriction that those officers shall charge no more for their services than a fair compensation for a year's service, not the fixed sum therein specified, and no rule is contained or intimated given by the law by which the Court can determine what proportion of the gross sum or prize proceeds paid into the Treasury is the proper compensation, or fixed toward the yearly allowances of the District-Attorney, Marshal or any other officer of Court and Prize Commissioners, nor but that the proceeds of captures in other cases may not be required to satisfy such items of costs.

Application denied.

Vanderbilt and the Accounting Tropic Company.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Justice Leonard.

David Colden Murray vs. Cornelius Vanderbilt.—This was an action brought to recover a large amount of property alleged to have been received by the defendant as President of the Company, together over $2,000,000. It was claimed that the defendant had purloined the money paid as subsidy by the Government, month after month, and that he had sold certain ships of the Company without accounting. The plaintiff sues on behalf of himself. The defense was that the subsidy had been paid over, except what was made all offset for certain debts due the defendant by the Company. He also claimed that the steamships alleged to have been sold were sold to satisfy mortgages held by him upon them. The case was often reported in the TIMES during the years 1860 and 1861.

The Court now rendered decision holding that the plaintiff was entitled to subsidy down to July, 1856, and ordering a reference in respect to the alleged sale of the Company's steamers. The opinion is of great length, an abstract may be given in a later issue of the TIMES.

Change of Risk by Removal Under a Policy of Insurance—The Company's Consent Therein Must be in Writing.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM.

Before Justice Sutherland.

Lewis Spitzer vs. The St. Mark's Fire Insurance Company.—This was an action upon a policy of insurance dated 20th October, 1862, issued by the defendants on the store and merchandise of one J. Engleman, at No. 61 Avenue D, in this City.

Subsequently Engleman removed his merchandise to the store No. 27 Grand-street, and the defendants set up that he removed without notice to them, and without their consent, and that the policy thereby became void. Subsequently, the defendants discovered the plaintiff in the street, as appeared, and after telling him that he was a liar, and with a sharp stick, proceeded to apply certain epithets to the plaintiff of a character with which he was not wholly satisfied, it being in the presence of others than himself. This was the result.

The defense was that the premium had not been paid, and that that action had been brought in the name of the executors of DAVID GRAHAM, and not in that of the plaintiff as surviving partner, for the purpose of profiting by the defendant's own wrongful acts in his own behalf; and that it was in respect to this that the defendant hailed the plaintiff in the street—what being, as it thought, insultingly repulsed, the defendant, under the excitement of the moment, used the language complained of, or language to the same effect, and that the plaintiff was not injured.

The jury thought the plaintiff had been injured to the extent of $300, and gave him a verdict for that sum.

JOHN MCKEON and JAMES E. WHITING for plaintiff; J. LAMOUQUE for defendant.

Unfortunate in Business and in Court.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM.

Before Justice Sutherland.

Robert Later vs. The American Female Guardian Society.—The plaintiff claims that the defendants, a corporation, publish a newspaper called the Advocate and Family Guardian, for which they employed him to do the press work, which they have now taken away from him, and given to another, he having fitted up a place and furnished materials for the performance of the work at much expense.

The defense was that the plaintiff did the work in question for the paper for about one year, but that the work was not done in a workmanlike manner, and not dispatched with the rapidity specified in the written contract. Also that the plaintiff voluntarily relinquished the work, on account of some unpleasant standing or dissatisfaction in respect to the price at which it was to be done.

Complaint dismissed.

C. P. WELLMORE, for plaintiff; MAY & PARSONS, for defendants.

Decisions.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

Before Justice Sutherland.

Parker vs. Parker; Beamish vs. Conway et al.—Motions denied without costs.

Clowe, Frank vs. Abraham, Frank; Bailey Baker vs. Alfred E. Baker.—Reports of Referee confirmed, and judgment at Stoddard granted.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

We have this morning received Gen. HOOKER's address to the Army of the Potomac on assuming command. It is brief, but energetic in terms. The only movement made yesterday was a movement of headquarters. Rain was again falling.

The news from North Carolina this morning is important. An expedition, comprising three gunboats and a number of transports, under command of Gen. POTTER, left Hatteras Inlet on the 24th inst. Its destination supposed to be Wilmington.

Another expedition was fitting out, and would sail soon, probably for the same destination. It was reported at Newbern that 75,000 rebel troops had been concentrated in North Carolina, from the Rappahannock and other points, to oppose Gen. POTTER.

The steamship Arago arrived at this port yesterday from Port Royal, which place she left on the afternoon of the 24th inst. The news by her is important. Gen. HUNTER had arrived out and resumed command of the Department once more, Gen. SAXTON returning to the North in the Arago. The indications are unmistakable that an active campaign will at once commence under Gen. HUNTER. And it is probable that Savannah, as being comparatively the nearest of the two principal points of attack, will be first attended to. On the 18th the iron-clad frigate Ironsides arrived at Port Royal; on the 19th, the Monitor battery Montauk arrived, and on the 20th the Monitor battery Passaic made her appearance. The Montauk, on the 20th, took her departure again, in company with two gunboats—her destination not stated, but probably the Savannah River. It was understood also that large reinforcements of troops were soon to arrive in the Department, and immediate steps are to be taken by Gen. HUNTER for the organization of a large number of soldiers of "African descent."

By the steamship Northern Light, which arrived at this port yesterday from the Gulf and Key West, we learn of the escape of the rebel steamer Oreto from Mobile, notwithstanding the vigilance of the blockaders. She is reported to have reached Havana, with upwards of a thousand bales of cotton on board, and having encountered and sunk a Boston brig, name unknown, on the way. It has been conjectured that the steamer which sunk the Hatteras off Galveston was the Oreto, but this cannot, of course, be the fact. There appears to be now no doubt that the Galveston "stranger" was the veritable Alabama.

We learn from Key West of the total loss of the transport ship Sparkling Sea, of the Banks Expedition, before reported ashore on Ajax Reef, on the Florida Coast. She had on board the Twenty-fifth New-York Battery, all the horses of which were drowned. The men were at Key West on the 20th, having lost all their appliances for active service. There are at present about thirty prize vessels in the harbor, whose cases have not been disposed of by the Admiralty Court.

The Washington correspondents of the Philadelphia papers notice rumors current at the capital to the effect that Major-Gen. McCLELLAN had tendered his resignation, and that Major-Gen. FOSTER had been arrested for improper conduct. Nothing definite had transpired to substantiate either report.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, a bill to authorize contracts in such States as may advance pay and allotment to volunteers and militia in the service, was introduced and referred to the Military Committee. The Military Committee was instructed to inquire into the expediency of authorizing the President to offer bounty for reenlistment to volunteers now in the service, and of providing by law for three months' soldiers, either by enlistment or draft. A motion to take up the resolution calling for the record of the Porter Court-Martial was disagreed to—22 to 18. The bill to provide for the removal of Indians from Kansas was passed; also, the bill to provide for the removal of Indians from Minnesota. The documents concerning the capture of British vessels sailing from one neutral port to another, having on board articles contraband of war, were sent in by the President. The bill indemnifying the President and other persons for suspending the privileges of the writ of habeas corpus, &c., was then considered until the adjournment.

In the House, after some business of no special interest, the Deficiency bill was considered in Committee of the Whole. Long speeches on National affairs were made by Messrs. CONWAY, of Kansas, and SHELLABARGER, of Ohio—the latter in response to Mr. VALLANDIGHAM. The Committee then rose, and bills authorizing the President to organize regiments of soldiers of African descent were introduced by Messrs. STEVENS and HICKMAN, of Pennsylvania. The House then adjourned.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate, yesterday, a concurrent resolution, declaring that the Senate and Assembly will, on Tuesday next, proceed to the election of a United States Senator, was laid on the table under the rule.

In the Assembly, Mr. FIELDS' resolutions providing for an investigation of the charges against Mr. CALLICOT were postponed for a week from Thursday next, and the regular business was proceeded with. Notice was given of a large number of bills, one of which provides for the election of the City Inspector of New-York by the people. Another proposes to remove the capital to the geographical centre of the State. Two sets of resolutions condemning the military arrests of the General Government were introduced. A resolution was introduced similar to the one in the Senate, for the election of United States Senator. A concurrent "peace" resolution, favoring a Convention of all the States, etc., was introduced. The resolution instructing the Comptroller to pay the members of the Legislature in gold, or its equivalent, was voted down.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival at this port of the steamship Saxonia, we have advices from Europe to the 14th inst. The most important feature of the news is the address of the French Emperor at the opening of the Corps Legislatif, which is thought to shadow forth French intervention in the affairs of the United States. He says: "I have made the attempt to send beyond the Atlantic advices inspired by a sincere sympathy; but the great maritime Powers not having thought it advisable as yet to act in concert with me, I have been obliged to postpone to a more suitable opportunity the offer of mediation, the object of which was to stop the effusion of blood, and to prevent the exhaustion of a country, the future of which cannot be looked upon with indifference." There was very little change in the Liverpool Cotton Market. Breadstuffs were generally steady. Provisions were dull. Consols were quoted at 92¾ for money. American stocks of all descriptions had advanced.

At the meeting of the Board of Supervisors yesterday, a request of the Grand Jury, indorsed by the District-Attorney, for additional accommodations for jurors and witnesses, was referred. Messages from the Mayor vetoing a batch of Harlem bridge bills; resolutions increasing the salaries of the District-Attorney and his assistants, and to appropriate $3,000 to correct the militia rolls, were received and laid over. The items for Police and Interest on County debt, as presented in Comptroller HAWES' estimates of County expenses for 1863, were reported upon by the Finance Committee and passed, to enable Comptroller BARNARD to raise and furnish money on those accounts. The death of Ex-Mayor WALLACE was suitably noticed, and the Board adjourned till 3 o'clock P. M. on Tuesday next.

The price of Gold Coin on the Stock Exchange was 2 ▼ cent. higher yesterday, while the Railway Shares were 1@2 ▼ cent. lower, the market leaving off steady. Gold, 153¼; Exchange, 169 ▼ cent.

Breadstuffs, Cotton, Groceries, Metals, Wool, Tobacco, Chemicals, Fruit, Rice, Spices and Tallow were in lively demand yesterday, at generally advanced prices. A fair business was reported in Hay, Hops, Hides, Leather, Fish, Manila Hemp, Foreign Liquors and the principal kinds of Oils. Provisions were more active; Hog products were quoted firmer. Moderate Freight engagements were effected.

The live stock markets show an uncommon degree of activity this week. There is a light supply of killing animals, and as the numbers were rather small last week, there is a good demand now. The weather has been warm and murky, which prevented butchers from killing much in advance, else the demand would be still greater. Poultry is getting scarce, and advancing in price, which creates a greater demand for meats.... Beeves number 4,027 head for the week, 3,496 of which were sold at Forty-fourth-street, Monday and Tuesday. The market was the best for near two years, the average sales being from 8¼c.@8¾c. ▼ lb., net weight, on rather common cattle. All kinds sold quickly, and for prime fat steers 10c. was often paid. The range was 7½c.@11c., most sales being between 8c. and 9½c. Prices are a shade higher than last week when better cattle were offered. The supply was not enough for butchers, and the first lot reaching here, was delayed cattle are sure to do after the market is over, will find quick sales.... Sheep are nearly 25c. ▼ head higher, and are in brisk demand, with not enough offering to supply the wants of butchers. Heavy, fat sheep can be weighed out at 7c. ▼ lb., and a few extra sheep have brought 7½c. They have not been so high for two years, at least.... Live hogs have advanced a trifle, owing to lighter receipts. The soft weather injures the market, but all have been disposed of, at 5½c. for prime, heavy, corn-fed hogs, and 5c.@5¼c. for medium and light stock.

Disobedient and Unwilling Generals.

An attempt is being made to get up a popular clamor against the military Court which cashiered FITZ-JOHN PORTER. It proceeds on the assumption that the tribunal was influenced by personal and political prejudice. There is no serious effort to substantiate this; the sole reliance is broad assertion and wild denunciation. It is taken for granted that these will tell well enough upon that great class who have not the time, or have not the disposition, to investigate; and that thus new animosity can be stirred up against the President, who approved the finding and the sentence.

To every reasonable man, the bare knowledge that the Court was composed of seven officers of such personal character and professional ability as Maj.-Gen. HUNTER, Maj.-Gen. HITCHCOCK, and Brig.-Gens. RICKETTS, CASEY, RUFUS KING, GARFIELD, BUFORD and MORRIS, with JOSEPH HOLT as Judge-Advocate, ought to be a sufficient guarantee of the correctness of its action, without the perusal of a line of the testimony on which that action was founded. There is not a civil tribunal in the land whose competence and integrity ought sooner to accredit its decisions, within its appropriate sphere.

The fair mind, which might be curious to go further, would only obtain a double assurance of this by the perusal of the evidence itself. That evidence was more minute and thorough than in almost any judicial investigation that ever occurred in our country. No less than forty-five days were occupied in taking it; and the utmost latitude was allowed the accused in the presentation of everything bearing in his favor, and in the cross-examination of all adverse witnesses. No facts have ever been more clearly made out than that Gen. PORTER was greatly disaffected by the displacement of Gen. McCLELLAN from the chief command; that he had a very bitter spirit against the new commander, Gen. POPE, which was expressed even in official correspondence; that he unnecessarily failed to obey, at the specified time, POPE's peremptory order to transfer his corps, which consisted of 13,000 splendid troops, from Warrenton Junction to Bristow Station, nine miles distant, and thereby exposed POPE's exhausted army to the greatest danger of destruction; and that, in the sanguinary battle of the next day, when POPE, with timely support, would unquestionably have been able to have vanquished the enemy, and probably have secured the destruction or capture of JACKSON's entire army, he remained inactive for seven or eight hours during the battle, almost in the immediate presence of the enemy; then marched away from the sound of the enemy's cannon, and did not retrace his steps even after receiving from Gen. POPE an express written order to "push forward into action at once, on the enemy's right flank, and, if possible, on his rear."

These proved facts were conclusively established by irrefragible testimony; and all the dextrous expedients of PORTER's most dextrous counsel, REVERDY JOHNSON, could not shake them a particle. A just mind, after scanning that evidence, finds its real surprise, not in the unqualified character of the verdict, but in the lightness of the sentence. The irresistible feeling is that a high officer of the United States, who, because of personal predilections and resentments, or for any other motive, could so permit his country's flag to be overborne, and his brethren in arms to be swept down in needless slaughter, turning into disastrous defeat what might have been an incalculable triumph, ought to have been let off with no such punishment as simply a dismissal from the army and a disqualification from all future offices of trust or profit, but should have been shot to death, in accordance both with natural justice and the articles of war. Impartial history will pronounce that to have been the only doom that could have expiated such guilt.

There is no one thing that so seriously threatens ruin to the National cause as the insubordination of its high officers to those invested with the chief command. In the early part of the war such instances often occurred; but were overlooked in the fond belief that greater experience in military life would cure the evil. On the other hand, it has only aggravated it. Probably never has been so much violent distrust and jealousy, and so much unwilling submission among our high officers, as during this very season. It was that, far more than the enemy's intrenchments, which foiled the first movement of BURNSIDE; and it was that, far more than the adverse elements, which paralyzed his second. It is almost incredible. The reason recoils from the idea that men of high education, of soldierly training, of patriotic instincts, of sworn obligations, should become so insensible to honor and duty. But such is the hard fact, and it is suicidal to ignore it. The Government is bound to apply a remedy. But there is no other remedy than the summary, inexorable arraignment of every officer, high or low, who does not faithfully and strictly obey the orders of his superior, and visiting upon him the severest sentence known to military law. The same absolute subordination and prompt, hearty obedience which is required from the rank and file, should be maintained in every official grade. From highest to lowest, there should be no distinctions, no exceptions. We rejoice to see the Government entering resolutely upon this line of duty. Let it be followed up unflinchingly in spite of the whining of the guilty officers, or the outcries of their personal friends, or the clamors of party men seeking party capital. The very salvation of the army, and of the country itself, may depend upon the strictness with which this new purpose of the Government is carried out.

The Speaker of the State Assembly.

Mr. CALLICOT deserves the highest praise for the manner in which he has conducted himself throughout the whole of the extraordinary contest which has happily closed by his election as Speaker of the State Assembly. His triumph is something more than the triumph of a party, as his conduct also showed that he could rise above the trammels of party when the welfare of the State and the course of legislation required that party should be ignored. He has been maligned, insulted, browbeaten, and threatened by members of his own party; charges the most preposterous have been made against him; abuse the most malign and interminable has been heaped upon him; and bullies belonging to the riotous faction have even gone so far as to threaten his assassination in case he was elected. It was twenty days from the time the House met till it was organized, and ten days from the time Mr. CALLICOT was nominated until he was chosen Speaker. For the first ten days of the session it seemed impossible to relieve the deadlock which the position of parties placed upon legislation. There had then been seventy-seven ballots for Speaker, and the prospect was, if neither side of the House had been sufficiently magnanimous to take up a candidate from the opposite party, and if every member of each political party had factiously adhered to it, that the ballotings might have reached a thousand, and the purpose for which the Legislature was elected have been utterly frustrated. There was but one course for the Republicans to adopt, and a Democrat was nominated. Since then, for ten days, the Assembly Chamber has exhibited scenes the like of which never before disgraced the Legislature of New-York. The proceedings of the factionists were little short of being revolutionary. The violence culminated on Saturday last, when Mr. FIELDS, who had been the leader in all, poured out a torrent of vulgar defamation upon Mr. CALLICOT, and defied the House to enforce order. During all this time, and amid all these scenes, Mr. CALLICOT bore himself with a manliness, courage and a prudence which could not be surpassed; and, through all, his patriotism has shone conspicuous. Those Democrats who, toward the end, exhibited a willingness to cut loose from the factionists who would have precipitated the State into revolution to forward their selfish purposes, and who aided in the effort to organize the House, also deserve the respect of all lovers of law and order.

Mr. CALLICOT, in his speech on taking the Chair, said that he still remained firmly attached to the political principles he had always professed, but added that his duties as Speaker should be performed with an equal regard to the rights of all, and with judicial fairness. This is all that is desired of him. And if he exhibits as Speaker the qualities of independence, courage and prudence he has shown while a candidate, an equal honor will be reflected on himself and on the Union members who nominated and sustained him. As for the Democratic members of the Assembly, we hope, for the honor of the State, that they will permit no further riotous demonstrations, and put no additional bar upon the progress of legislation. Time enough has been wasted, and disgrace enough endured, already.

FRENCH-AMERICAN POLICY.—The speech of the Emperor of the French, on the opening of the Legislative Chambers, on the 12th instant, puts forth no new views or purposes of the Imperial mind, in reference to his American policy. He states that "the situation of the Empire would be flourishing, if the American war had not come to dry up one of the most fruitful sources of our industry;" and, further on, adds:

"I have attempted to convey beyond the Atlantic counsels inspired by a sincere sympathy; but the great maritime Powers not having believed they could yet join me, I have been obliged to defer, to a more fitting period, the offer of mediation, the object of which was to stop the effusion of blood, and to prevent the exhaustion of a country, the future of which cannot be a matter of indifference."

The Emperor's "counsels, inspired by sincere sympathy," were, of course, received with sincere respect; and the objects which he states he had in view in his offer of mediation are equally creditable to his head and heart. It is even more evident to us than to him that the period to renew those offers has not yet come; and if the Emperor will only make up his mind to delay his services until we ask for them, it will save him a good deal of anxiety, and the American belligerents a good deal of trouble.

THE SPLENDID FIGHTING AT MURFREESBORO.—In the recent article upon the comparative bloodshed in our great engagements and those of Europe, we had to rely upon telegraphic reports alone respecting the numbers engaged and losses incurred at the late battle of Murfreesboro, or Stone's River, under ROSECRANS, and were thereby led into a very material error. It now appears that, instead of there being 50,000 National troops in that action, there were only 45,000, and the official returns show the loss of officers and men to have been 1,697 killed, and 7,425 wounded—making an aggregate of 9,122, instead of "about 5,000," as was first reported. Thus the casualties were not ten per cent., as resulted from this first data, but, in reality, over twenty per cent. This is a ratio exceeding that at Bautzen, at Lutzen, at Leipsic, at Wagram, at Austerlitz, and nearly, if not quite, equal to that at Friedland and Marengo. It is double that of Shiloh and Fredericksburgh, and six or seven per cent. higher than that of Antietam.

In truth, the better the battle of Murfreesboro is understood, the greater precedence does it take over every other encounter of the war. The enemy in this case—which has seldom happened before—enjoyed both of the great advantages, superior position and superior numbers. The position he had deliberately chosen and intrenched; and his numbers, it is now established, were at least 62,000—exceeding ours by seventeen thousand. This disparity was made still greater by the misfortune in the first stage of the battle on our right wing, by which between three and four thousand of our men were taken prisoners. It was the extraordinary constancy and splendid tactics of ROSECRANS, supported by the zeal of the subordinate commanders and the unexampled stubbornness of the rank and file, that transferred the early reverse into a grand victory. Would to Heaven that we could have such generalship and soldiership everywhere. They would speedily make an end of this bloody rebellion.

FRENCH ATROCITIES IN MEXICO.—Nowhere has there been more of an outcry raised against Gen. BUTLER than in France. The sympathizers with secession have adroitly availed themselves of the ancient ties which existed between Louisiana and France, and have filled the ears of Frenchmen with dreadful stories of oppression and cruelties upon a kindred people, which were not allowed to be contradicted through the press. One of our Paris correspondents, in a recent letter, said that "long lists of names of respectable men are published, who have been consigned by BUTLER to imprisonment on Ship Island, the forts at the mouth of the Mississippi and Fort Pickens." Nor is any inquiry allowed as to whether the facts are so, or what these individuals have been guilty of, but the ceaseless cry of atrocity and brutality is raised, and the pressure thus created is put forward as a pretext to claim from the Government of France action in favor of the rebels.

Let us call attention to a somewhat analogous, and yet in many respects very different case, in the action of the French at Vera Cruz. It is analogous in that it is the occupation of a city by a military force, but it differs in that it is an occupation by the forces of a Power having no claim to be anything more than a foreign and invading enemy. The citizens of Vera Cruz owed no obedience to France; they had committed no offence against her laws. But Gen. BUTLER went to a city guilty of treason of the worst kind. He carried with him the flag to which many of her leading men had sworn allegiance, but had violated their oaths. They were guilty before the law of a crime whose punishment is death. And yet he is stigmatized as a tyrant because he has sent some of these traitors to an island where, as he said, he had himself encamped with his own troops for weeks before he entered the city.

How is it at Vera Cruz? Our correspondent at Havana informs us that the French are sending not only citizens of Vera Cruz, but natives of the interior mountainous country, who are prisoners of war, not to a fort a few miles away, not to an island at the mouth of their own river, but to the Island of Martinique, a thousand miles away, to fall victims to the yellow fever. Says the correspondent of the Havana Prensa, writing from Vera Cruz:

"The name of Martinique is as terrible here as that of Cuba or Melilla would be in Spain or Cuba for delinquents. Every one that offends the French is transported to Martinique, and whoever does not serve them willingly is threatened with a like transportation."

And these, it must be remembered, are prisoners of war, not guilty of any offence against the French Government, but only offences against their military authorities in Vera Cruz.

There have not been wanting among our secession sheets here those who, taking their cue in this, as in other things, from the rebels and their friends abroad, have berated Gen. BUTLER with a vast deal more energy than they ever berated JEFF. DAVIS. We call the attention of these gentry to the course pursued at Vera Cruz, by those whose cheap at Bermuda they cobs, and to suggest that impartiality requires that they should not give to an officer fighting against treason any harsher measure than they give to the leaders of an expedition, to compel by force, the payment, by a weaker Power, of a disputed and doubtful claim.

GENERALS OUT OF WORK.—We trust that the large number of high army officers now idle and out of command, will speedily be assigned by the Government to active work. We need the services of all our Generals, and if they cannot all be commanders of first-class armies, there is plenty of honorable service which they should be glad for the sake of their country to do.

We trust that Gen. BURNSIDE, for instance, will not be allowed to go into retirement. No one doubts his great ability, or his anxiety to serve the Union. Why should he not be sent back to the scene of his former victorious exploits in North Carolina? There is now an army in that State large enough to be capable of great deeds, and if it be as large as the rebels say, it is nearly equal to BURNSIDE's late command on the Rappahannock. Gen. POTTER, who is at the head of it, is a good soldier; but BURNSIDE is the man for the place. POTTER served under BURNSIDE once before, and would be proud to do so again.

Gen. McCLELLAN, too, ought not to be ordered to remain in inglorious ease at such a crisis of his country's fate as this. Some have suggested that he be sent West to lay siege to Vicksburgh; but, Gen. GRANT is probably by this time engaged in a different kind of attack upon that place. But say, for instance, that the detached forces in the West were brought together, and put under his command, to capture Knoxville, he would be enabled to strike a greater blow at the rebellion than if he had captured Richmond. There are no swamps in that country in which an army could be planted, and there would be no need for interminable siege operations. Gen. McCLELLAN first gained his reputation by the rapidity and dash of his movements in Western Virginia, and he would have another opportunity for just such work in East Tennessee.

Gen. FREMONT has been too long in retirement. His popularity in the West is still prodigious. Why should he not take the brave little army which is wasting away its time and vim in Western Arkansas under Gen. SCOFIELD, and with it push down to the Capital of Arkansas, and take military possession of the State, and enforce the President's Proclamation? There cannot be many rebel soldiers now in that State, since our capture of the large body at Arkansas Post; but still, just for the name of the thing, as well as for territorial and political gain, it is a State well worth holding.

There are still five other Major-Generals, (BUELL, McDOWELL, SUMNER, FRANKLIN, and C. M. CLAY,) four of them at least able soldiers, in certain kinds of work, who have at present no command. We could easily designate them to posts of honor, and posts where they might be of great service to their country.

There are also eighteen Brigadier-Generals without actual command, every one of whom (except the sick and wounded ones) ought to be ashamed of doing nothing; and probably they all are. The Government should put every well man of them to duty of some kind, as they are all drawing their pay from the Government.

COOL AND COMFORTABLE.—We have been neglecting the London Times for some time past; but in its issue of the 14th, which arrived here yesterday, there is a "peace proposition," at once so cool and exhilarating that we cannot help thinking it worth a paragraph, if but for the benefit of Northern advocates of peace and secession. It is setting forth the prospect of a general disruption between the States, and the great disquiet which was growing up in New-York, and proposes the following solution of the whole matter:

"Apparently the only way to solve the whole dilemma would be for the Federal Government to dissolve itself, and, declaring the sovereign independence of each State, leave each perfectly unfettered to form its own connections for the future, a position of affairs which might enable, under mutual compromises, a new Interstate to be formed that should again comprise the whole of them. Such an act of self-abnegation, however, is scarcely likely to proceed from Washington."

We should think so.

THE MAYOR ON HARBOR DEFENCE.—In the summary of "General News" in the TIMES of yesterday, the synopsis of the proceedings of the Board of Aldermen states that "the $1,000,000 Harbor Defence ordinance, lost last year by the Mayor's veto, was introduced anew by Alderman BOOLE, and laid over." This reference to the Mayor's action as to harbor defence, we learn, is a mistake; the fact being that he has repeatedly urged such an appropriation, but always, thus far, unsuccessfully. So far from having vetoed any ordinance on the subject, he has been especially earnest in his efforts to induce the Common Council to provide for the defence of the harbor.

The Great International Agricultural Exhibition.

Which is to take place at Hamburg during the next Summer, is attracting much interest among our citizens. Several of our principal State Societies have already determined upon sending representatives to this great gathering of those agriculturists and our manufacturers of improved agricultural machinery will, doubtless, contribute largely to the exhibition.

This opportunity for improving our commercial and social relations with the people of the German States and the adjacent countries, should not be neglected. A very considerable demand already exists at that point for our agricultural machines, which will only require a more extensive knowledge of our many valuable improvements to increase it many fold.

Our German fellow citizens will feel much interest in this exhibition, and they will have a commendable pride in the country of their adoption being fully represented. We refer our readers to our advertising columns for information.

FOOD FOR THE ARMY SENT FROM NEW-YORK.—The steam transport Thomas Sumner, from Fortress Monroe, arrived yesterday. She has on board 1,000 bbls. of damaged beans, sent from New-York as food for the army.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT FROM PARIS.

The Policy of the French Emperor Regarding the United States.

The Significance of his Address to the French Legislature.

A Remarkable Article from the Emperor's Organ.

From OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Tuesday, Jan. 13, 1863.

The impression produced in the better class of the French population by the Emperor's discourse is unfavorable, for, although to the masses the speech is tame and insignificant, this very tameness and insignificance constitutes, for the more observing classes, its dangerous character. That the word "Mexico" should have occurred but once, and that at the tail of China and Cochin China, and as a sort of incidental affair to these, provoked a laugh of derision wherever it was read. It is known, in fact, that the question of Mexico excites the most serious consideration, and, I may add, apprehension of the Cabinet, and for various reasons, which I need not detail here; and to pass it over thus was simply to say: I do not know how much I dare say on that question, therefore I shall say nothing.

It is generally remarked also, by those who take the pains to study out the thoughts which presided at the writing of the Imperial speech, that the only exterior subject on which it enters into detail is that of America, and that his Majesty, while thus directing the eyes of the nation so particularly to this subject, is anxious to give such a turn to the sentence as will keep the probability of an offer of mediation before the public. In this connection, I learn verbally that, in the Council of the Cabinet which was held on Saturday evening, to hear the reading of the Imperial discourse, explanations were demanded by Ministers on the word "encore," as applied in the paragraph on the question of an armistice in America, and that, in the discussion which ensued, His Majesty insisted absolutely upon the maintenance of the word.

It is my duty to tell you here that a veritable panic reigns in the editorial bureaux of Paris on the subject of the Imperial attitude toward America. The following are the facts which have produced this panic:

In the first place, it is known that the ministerial organs within a few days have received an order to constantly harp on the doctrine that the separation is final in America, and that it is time to see about getting cotton. This order is being faithfully executed, and by none with more zeal than the Moniteur. This paper commenced its secession policy by a most unjustifiable and unwarrantable attack on Gen. SCHENCK, Governor of Baltimore. (It is not worth while to speak of the abuse of Gen. BUTLER, notwithstanding his recall, for that is in one sense an old subject.)

The Government anticipates, or at least is afraid of, the election of about thirty Democrats to the Chamber at the Spring election, and this is an opposition which would endanger the durability of such a régime as at present holds power in France. It is said, therefore, that the Government, rather than allow the elections to go too strong in the democratic sense, will risk a foreign war as a diversion, even with America.

Prince NAPOLEON was lately heard to declare himself converted to the doctrine of separation in America.

The Revue de l'Empire, a hebdomadal sheet written in the Ministerial Bureau, appears to be published solely for the object of propagating the doctrine of separation.

Several of the liberal journals are becoming seriously divided in their bureaux de rédaction, on this same question.

Orders have lately been issued to all the naval ports, to hasten the naval preparations with the greatest activity, but with as little display as possible.

But quite as important and as significant as all the rest, is the following article from La Nation, which is said in the newspaper offices to have been written by the Emperor, or, at least, to have been dictated in his bureau. I sought to tell you that after the Empress founded her organ, La France, directed by the Viscount DE LA GUERONNIERE, the Emperor was anxious, also, to secure an organ, and thus a leading Bonapartist Deputy, M. GRANIER DE CASSAGNAC, was authorized to found La Nation, a journal which has now reached its thirteenth number. The article which follows, and which I translate entire from this paper, appeared in the Sunday edition, and consequently the day before the delivery of the Imperial discourse at the opening of the Chambers. For those who are in the secret of this document, it is considered much more important than the official discourse. Here it is: MALAKOFF.

From La Nation, Jan. 11.

The crisis in cotton manufacture is acquiring daily such proportions as ought in France as well as elsewhere to call upon it the serious meditation of publicists, of statesmen and of Governments.

Like the crisis which results from a deficient crop of grain, the crisis in cotton does not give a hope of a speedy amelioration, founded on the probability of a better harvest. On the contrary, the crisis in cotton manufacture does not reasonably promise anything but an aggravation.

On the one hand, experience proves that the supplies of cotton furnished by India, Egypt and Algeria are insufficient; and on the other, it is manifest that the want of material, which has made itself felt thus far but in a few places, will not be long in extending itself to all the others.

The question of knowing how to give work and life to the numerous workmen in this great industry, places itself before us, therefore, in all that it possesses of seriousness, of pressing haste and of formidableness. It is a question for the serious attention of all friends of humanity and of order.

In definitive, here are the terms of the problem: No other country than America being able for a long time to come to furnish the necessary amount of cotton, by what reasonable and practicable way may America be brought to again furnish our supplies?

We know of but one precedent, to speak the truth, which, borrowed from a similar situation, may be examined and weighed in connexion with this one, and this precedent is the war waged by England against China in 1841, to force the latter to accept the opium of India in exchange for tea. The English thought, in the circumstance we now recall, that justice permitted them to establish, by a military intervention, a traditional commerce, the interruption of which was highly prejudicial to England and to Europe.

It will be admitted, without hesitation, that the establishment of the commerce of cotton with America will present itself in conditions much more conformable to the principles of equity and of general utility.

In the first place, to lack cotton, that is to say, to

[illegible]

[illegible] the country, where their suspension of specie payments, have also largely expanded their paper issues, and under existing temptations are likely to continue doing so. Practically the Treasury Department and the local banks are to-day engaged in a competing race, to see which can expand the most rapidly, and which shall reach the goal of bankruptcy and repudiation most speedily! It is for Congress to determine whether this shall continue, or whether the strong arm of National law shall be interposed to regulate the currency in such manner that Government and people alike may be saved from common ruin.

THE GENERAL NATIONAL BANKING SCHEME.

The House of Representatives has nearly matured its chief Finance bill for the present session. I do not propose to discuss its features. Suffice it to say, that while the bill, as matured in Committee of the Whole, is not altogether in accordance with the carefully adopted views of Secretary CHASE, it is understood that he considers it, on the whole, a fair measure, and one that he can make answer the necessities of the pending crisis, provided it is sustained by additional legislation necessary to give it due vitality and strength among capitalists, and before the country. Chief among the still needed legislation, is a bill to establish Mr. CHASE's National Banking scheme, which hitherto has been overshadowed far too obscurely by the discussion of local banks all over the land. I do not mean to charge that Congress is wilfully disregarding the interests of the country out of consideration for those of the banking institutions in their several districts; but these institutions have so constantly and persistently decried the Secretary's proposition, presenting only ex parte, and, therefore, inaccurate arguments upon the policy proposed, that gentlemen in Congress have in many cases become, insensibly to themselves, so prejudiced against the proposed measure, that they have passed it by as unworthy of consideration. What is now needed is to arouse and challenge their attention to the financial perils so imminent, and to lead them to candid investigation, for themselves, of the remedy proposed. Let them not forget that Mr. CHASE's Bank scheme receives thorough indorsement and support at the hands of such men as Hon. ROBERT J. WALKER, who have made the science of finance in its broadest sense the study of their lives, and who see in the measure under discussion our only salvation from financial ruin—which latter involves the destruction of the Union, private as well as public bankruptcy, endless war and anarchy. Terrible as is the picture thus drawn, Congress has to elect, within the next four weeks, whether it shall be realized in all its horrors, or whether, by sustaining the Government and triumphantly ending the struggle, we shall find success, union, peace and permanent prosperity and happiness.

WILL AMERICA TREMBLE A SECOND FINANCIAL TREMBLE?

If gentlemen do not like Mr. CHASE's plan, they are at least bound to find a better—one that will stand equally well the test of such careful examination and intense study as the Secretary has bestowed upon his own proposition, and at the same time command more of popular confidence. It is, at least, the duty of every man who has a vote on the subject, to examine for himself, and be sure of the reasons for his faith before he decides that the so-called Bank scheme is not worthy of his support. The country has confidence in Mr. CHASE. The people honor his integrity, know the purity of his patriotism, and have faith in his sound judgment. The least rumor that he may retire from the Cabinet sends a tremor of alarm to the remotest corner of the loyal States. Now then can the people sustain their representatives, if they refuse to listen to his counsels, and persist in demanding that he shall carry on the financial operations of the Government, while they withhold the tools deemed by him essential to the work? Is it not worse than absurd to ask him to remain in his present position—expect him to make the administration of the Treasury a success, and yet insist that he shall do it, not by reliance upon such a policy as he believes adapted to the desired end, but by dependence upon some other which his investigation has already satisfied him is totally inadequate to the exigency?

THE BANK SCHEME STRONGLY INDORSED BY THE ENTIRE ADMINISTRATION.

One word more. The President of the United States, in a recent message to Congress, has practically announced the National Banking scheme as an Administration measure. Mr. CHASE's judgment on this special point is thoroughly indorsed by all his associates in the Government, to whom every detail of the national condition is fully known. This is no mere complimentary support extended in the heat of the Treasury. It is a well-known fact (and every man may be certain it by asking any member of the Cabinet) that the Administration are and has been an entire [illegible] upon that question. The President and his constitutional advisers all agree that the proposed Banking scheme is indispensable to the maintenance of the Government; and they will each and all give it their earnest and hearty support. It remains simply for gentlemen in Congress to say whether they will sustain the Executive in so vital a matter, since he has taken his position and the responsibility so definitely. If they fail to do so, and ruin ensues, how will they answer to their children and children's children? The crisis is upon us. It must be met now. Congress cannot safely adjourn unless the threatened peril shall have been averted—and only one short month of the session remains. Will not the people impress upon their representatives in Congress the necessity for immediate action?

In another letter I propose to consider the Secretary's plan, and present some arguments as to its wisdom and necessity. B.

FROM SAN FRANCISCO.

The French Fleet Repulsed at Mazatlan.

SAN FRANCISCO, Tuesday, Jan. 27.

The steamer Oregon has arrived from Mazatlan, 17th. [illegible]

Great activity prevailed in mining operations in Sonora and Mexico. Very superior machinery was being erected in several silver mines.

The French fleet was daily expected at Mazatlan. There therefore Mexican soldiers were there, who would retire a-la-de Sonora inland and make a stand, should the French occupy the city, which was for fortifications against Mexicans.

The Bombardment of Acapulco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Tuesday, Jan. 27—4 P. M.

Further particulars of the bombardment of Acapulco explain the object of the French fleet to be a want of supplies. The Mexicans refused; they could not fight the French on the Atlantic and feed them on the Pacific. The ships then commenced entering the harbor, the Mexicans opened fire from the shore batteries and a fort three miles from the fleet. The shore batteries were soon silenced, but the fort maintained itself. After destroying twelve houses and damaging fifty, the fleet put to sea without capture, the Mexicans continuing their fire from the fort.

The Bombardment of the Alabama—LETTER FROM BARING BROTHERS & CO. TO C. M. MARSHALL.

LONDON, Saturday, Dec. 27, 1862.

Charles M. Marshall, Esq., Mon-Tout:

DEAR SIR: We thank you for your valued letter of the 20th ult., the contents of which have had our careful consideration. The nature of our commercial relations with the United States naturally draws our attention to any event that threatens the safety of the ships and cargoes of our friends, and we are considering in conjunction with other British merchants what steps can be taken to prevent any ships like the Alabama escaping in future.

The fitting out of the Alabama is believed (although she was not armed in a British port) to be a breach of the laws of this country, and we have every reason to hope that the British Government will be watchful to prevent their violation in future.

We are much obliged for the kind expressions contained in your letter, and wishing you many happy returns of the season, remain,

Dear Sir, very truly yours,
BARING BROS. & CO.

Besides the Serial Novels by the Authors of "Adam Bede" and "Orley Farm," HARPER'S MAGAZINE for February contains papers by American Writers whose articles have been received with especial favor. Among the contributors to the present number are the Authors of "Twilight," "The Isle of the Puritans," "My Firesides with the Baby," and "Was he Right?" The "Guilbertine in Iceland" conducts his readers into the heart of the most characteristic region of that romantic island. The paper upon the "Gentlemen of the Press" describes the practical working of our great newspaper establishments, giving an idea of the labor and cost involved in the production of a daily paper. The "Crater of the Essex" forms one of the most striking chapters in the history of our war in the Southern seas.

The illustrations of this number are mainly from original drawings by CHAPIN, BELLEW, PERKINS, STANTON, YOUNG, HOPPIN, JEWETT and MCLENAN. These have been produced at an expense which exceeds that of the entire cost of the literary matter and illustrations of any other Magazine in the world. As an illustrated Magazine, in which the pencil of the Artist aids and supplements the pen of the Writer, HARPER'S MAGAZINE has no rival, while it furnishes in addition a larger amount of reading matter than is given in any other Magazine in Europe or America.

The papers of permanent value which have been published in almost every Number render a complete set of HARPER'S MAGAZINE a desirable acquisition to any public or private library. The Publishers can supply complete sets, or any Number from the commencement. For Twenty-five Cents they will send any Number by mail, post-paid. Any Volume, containing six Numbers, bound in Muslin, will be mailed, post-paid, to any place in the United States within 1,500 miles of New-York, for Two Dollars and Fifty Cents. Complete sets, now comprising Twenty-five Volumes, uniformly bound, will be sent by express, the freight at the charge of the purchaser, for One Dollar and Eighty-eight Cents per Volume.

DEAFNESS
NOISES IN THE HEAD,
Diseases of the Eye, Ear & Throat,
CATARRH CURED
BY
DR. VON EISENBERG.

From the Journal of Commerce.

EXCITING NEWS FOR THE DEAF.—An instrument called Dr. Von Eisenberg's Air Passage Expander and Regulator, a gigantic machine, weighing nearly five hundred pounds, about five feet in height, a most wonderful apparatus for restoring sight and hearing, has just arrived for Dr. Von Eisenberg, the celebrated Oculist and Aurist, and will be on exhibition at the Doctor's office, 702 Broadway, for a few days previous to its sale. The instrument is constructed according to the most scientific principles. To give a detailed description would require a greater space than we can now spare. Our Oculist and Aurist seems to do everything in the line of his profession on a gigantic scale. The new instrument for restoring hearing to the deaf and sight to the blind is constructed that it cannot fail to open the most obstructed air passages. His new consulting rooms, No. 702 Broadway, are correspondingly magnificent, and his practice as Aurist and Oculist large and continually increasing.

NEW-YORK, July 15, 1862.

This certifies that my mother has been for years troubled with partial deafness, suffering from pain and rumbling noises in the head. Operated with other remedies of a total loss of hearing. Dr. Von Eisenberg removed from her ears a good quantity of matter, together with congealed blood, restoring her instantaneously, and all without pain. It is with greatest thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.
CARROLL J. POST, No. 32 Bond-st.

NEW-YORK, June 16, 1862.

I have great pleasure in and my testimony to the number of others which Dr. Von Eisenberg's great skill has already gained for him. I was suffering from deafness, accompanied by a very unpleasant discharge from my ear. The Doctor operated upon my ear, removing a polypus with a gentleness that fully demonstrated the efficiency of the scientific system peculiar to himself. I am completely restored to hearing.
JOSEPH MANNING, No. 100 West 26th-st.

NEW-YORK, June 10, 1862.

I have been for many years afflicted with deafness, accompanied by a roaring noise in my head, for the benefit of which I placed myself under the care of Dr. Von Eisenberg, and am happy to say that to this date the Doctor has shown that skill and knowledge which has placed him at the head of his profession. I do, therefore, with the utmost confidence, recommend any one afflicted with deafness to place themselves under his care.
HENRY BROWNING, No. 241 West 35th-st.

NEW-YORK, Nov. 6, 1862.

DR. VON EISENBERG—Dear Sir: Before taking leave of you, after your most successful operation on my ear, allow me to express my sincere thanks that, by your scientific surgical performance, I am enabled to hear distinctly, and enjoy a pleasure of which I have long been deprived—over a year. May you be rewarded by being enabled to perform many similar, to benefit other sufferers and to your own emolument.
Allow me to present my kindest regards and believe me to be your grateful remembrancer.
A. McDONALD REYNOLDS,
Captain Marines, United States.

NEW-YORK, April 16, 1862.

I have great pleasure in testifying to the remarkable success of Dr. VON EISENBERG. I have been afflicted with deafness and noises in the head for several years, with slight indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. VON EISENBERG has surpassed my belief in his skillful treatment, to cure me in so short a time, and I am absolutely satisfied.
S. A. SMITH,
No. 126 Atlantic-st., South Brooklyn.

NEW-YORK, May 17, 1862.

I have much pleasure in being able to certify that I have suffered for a long time from deafness, and nearly completely so of late. I have consulted a great many, but no one was given to me to hope for a cure, until I came to Dr. Von Eisenberg, who, after operating for a great many days, succeeded in restoring my hearing to a great degree. I determined, by his advice, that care, as I expected, I could not be quite cured. From the skillful treatment I have received, and the attention which I experienced from the Doctor, I have no hesitation in recommending all those suffering from diseases of the eye to place themselves under Dr. Von Eisenberg's care, which, in the course of a few days, will be cured. I shall be happy to bear personal testimony.

STRENGTH FOR THE EXHAUSTED.—Thousands die, as it were, each by inch, of debility, weakness; for debility will kill as certainly, though not so quickly, as a raging fever. In hundreds here the weak shall be made strong; the debilitated invigorated and regained; the exhausted rallied with vital energy! We aver that of all invigorating preparations given for science to man, from the institution of the art of healing to the present hour, not one has wrought such wonders in the way of restoration as HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS.
This is, indeed, the fount of health. As a vitalizing, strength-imparting, life-sustaining cordial, the like of it is not to be found in the catalogue of medicines. Among the various articles used to assist the diminished powers of nature it stands alone—the great mainstay of the paralytical invalid. It not only arrests the physical powers from a state of collapse and dissolution, but it imparts permanent vigor to the muscular and nervous tissues—invigorating, as it were, both the stomachic and the extremities of vitality. The aged, the decrepit, the nervous, the broken down of both sexes, are recommended to try it. They will assuredly find it a present help in time of trouble. DEPOT, No. 420 BROADWAY.

THE PRIZE ESSAYS IN THE LIBRARY SOCIETIES.

The Senior Prize Debate of the Lincoln Society of Yale College took place on the evening of Jan. 22, at the Society Room. The Committee of Award were Prof. Stoever, A. Newton, Prof. Wenzmuller, Rev. E. H. Rev. Henry Harwood.

Question.—"Is some form of Trial by Judges Preferable to the Present Jury System?"

There was quite a good list of speakers, and the attendance was one of interest. Prizes were awarded as follows:

First prize, L. T. Chamberlain, West Brookfield, Mass.

Second prize, Wm. C. Warner, Cambridge, Mass.

Third prize, Geo. S. Hamlin, Sharon, Conn.

The Senior Prize Debate of the Brothers in Unity took place on the evening of Jan. 21.

The question for discussion was, "Has the order of the Jesuits tended to advance civilization?" The Committee of Award were Rev. R. R. Gurnsey, D. D., Rev. Prof. Gideon T. Person, and Cyrus Northrop.

The first prize of $20 was awarded to Wm. G. Barnes, of Hartford; the second prize of $15 to Howard Kessmann, of New-York, and the third prize of $5 to Chas. H. Weaver, of Brooklyn, E. D.

At a meeting of the Senior Class of Yale College for the election of a class orator and poet, the following gentlemen were unanimously elected: Orator, W. C. Wenzer, Cambridge, Mass.; Poet, C. S. L. Hemenway, West Springfield, Mass.

SERIOUS EXPLOSION AT THE WATERVLIET ARSENAL.

A serious explosion occurred at the Watervliet Arsenal. Owing to a fortunate combination of circumstances, no person was injured, but the excess from a disaster far more serious than that which occurred in the Fall of 1861, was narrow. The explosion took place in the finishing shop. One of the workmen had engaged in polishing a revolving emery wheel, when the sparks set fire to a quantity of shavings that were lying near by. Six thousand fuses were simultaneously lighted, with a tremendous report. The doors and windows of the building were blown out, and the floors of the upper story were torn up. Several men who were at work in the shop, ran out in the second story of the building, which was in flames, and escaped unhurt. It was found that no one was injured by the accident. Until recently, however, powder and shell had been kept within a few hundred yards of the building, and had the fuses been near at the time of the accident, the building would have been a wreck and several lives have been lost.

The accident was not without its amusing features. One of the workmen, in his haste to escape from the building, had lost one of his red jackets. He supposed that it was the blood of his mangled companions, and rushed to the officers' quarters to report himself as the only survivor of the carnage. Another employee, a German, had a cut on his head, which the explosion took place. As soon as the smoke cleared away, he westward on his knees, in the attitude of prayer, invoking the Deity whose name he had so recently been taking in vain.—Troy Times, Jan. 26.

PITCH-PINE FORESTS IN THE BAHAMAS.—We understand that a great quantity of tar has recently been produced from trees growing on the extensive pine forest of Andros Island, which realized $15 a barrel at Nassau. There are three other large pine forests in the Bahamas—one at Eleuthera, one at Long Island, and one at Grand Bahama—which, under Royal Grant to the Crown, could be made available for the production of turpentine and tar, and since manufactures have so much a permanent consequence of the civil war in America, we wonder that all our resources are not turned to account.—Nassau Gazette, Dec. 27.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Gen. Hooker in Consultation with the Authorities.

Adverse Action on the House Finance Bill in the Senate Finance Committee.

A SUBSTITUTE TO BE REPORTED.

The Proposed Submarine Telegraph to the Gulf Ports.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Jan. 27.

GEN. HOOKER.

Gen. Hooker arrived here this morning, and had lengthy interviews with the President and Gen. HALLECK, and the Secretary of War. He will return to Falmouth to-morrow.

SUMNER AND FRANKLIN.

Gens. SUMNER and FRANKLIN reported themselves at the War Department this morning.

THE FINANCE BILL.

The Senate Finance Committee to-day considered the House Ways and Means bill passed yesterday, and decided to report a substitute which shall more fully suit the views of Secretary CHASE, who is opposed entirely to creating the power to issue legal tender notes, as likely to stimulate an unhealthy inflation, and who prefers to depend upon the sale of bonds and the issue of interest-bearing notes. This conclusion is unexpected by the more sanguine friends of the legal tender system, and must be the beginning of a system of legislative action which will restrain the present feverish excitement in financial circles.

SENATOR SHERMAN'S BANK BILL.

The Bank bill of Senator SHERMAN, introduced yesterday, has several important peculiarities not in the bill of Mr. HOOPER, and is the embodiment of Secretary CHASE'S views. Under its provisions, all existing Banks may organize and preserve all corporate franchises except the power to issue circulating notes. The amount of notes is limited to two hundred millions of dollars, one-half to be apportioned among the States according to population, and the other in proportion to present capital. The Associations are limited to twenty years. This bill has the support of the entire Finance Committee of the Senate, and will pass that body by a large majority.

A SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH.

Mr. OLIN was instructed by the House Military Committee to report a bill, authorizing the Secretary of War immediately to contract for the construction of a submarine telegraph from Fort McHenry or Fortress Monroe to Galveston, touching at various points on the coast of North and South Carolina and Florida, and at Fort Pickens, and with a branch to New-Orleans.

MR. CONWAY'S SPEECH.

The speech of Mr. CONWAY, of Kansas, in the House to-day, was listened to with marked attention, and elicited general praise for its ability and honesty of purpose, if not for its popularity of sentiment. The speaker took the ground that the war had not become an element of reaction, and that its tendency was to bring into power a Democratic fusion party, pledged to a restoration of the Union on terms satisfactory to the South. He thought that force had spent itself, and that the dispute must be settled by compromise or separation. He was in favor of separation, on the idea that reunion would ultimately follow on an Anti-Slavery basis.

PICKETS DRIVEN IN.

Our pickets at Chantilly were last night driven in by WHITE'S guerrillas. No casualties, nor captures.

THE COMMISSARY DEPARTMENT.

The House Committee on Military Affairs have instructed their Chairman, Mr. OLIN, to report a bill to promote the efficiency of the Commissary Department.

GEN. J. H. HOBART WARD.

Very great injustice is sometimes done to meritorious officers by the delays and accidents inseparable from the rounds of the War Department. Gen. J. H. HOBART WARD suffers at present from this cause. The Senate, not long since, called on the Secretary for a list of all the Brigadier-Generals [illegible] command. Gen. WARD was at that time in command of the Second Brigade, First Division, of the Third Corps of the Army of the Potomac, by appointment of Gen. BURNSIDE, but his papers did not happen to have been placed on file at the War Department when the call was made, and his name was therefore omitted. It is to be presumed that this omission will be remedied in the Senate, and that WARD'S confirmation will promptly follow. He has been one of the most active, devoted and efficient officers in the service. He has been in every engagement of KEARNY'S Division and has made himself conspicuous for gallantry and good conduct in every instance. At Fredericksburgh, out of 1,400 taken into the action, he lost 800.

A SUPPOSED SPY.

A British officer serving in Canada was recently arrested at Point of Rocks on his return from Richmond. As he was making his way into our lines he was arrested as a spy and committed to the old Capitol prison. He will be tried by Court Martial. His name is said to be WEBB.

A BRITISH MEDICAL OFFICER.

Inspector-General MILE, of the British army, is here, the guest of Surgeon-General HAMMOND. He comes here, commissioned by his Government, to observe the workings of our Medical Department.

THE MILITARY NOMINATIONS.

The Senate Committee on Military Affairs will to-morrow consider the recent nominations sent in by the President. The Committee will report adversely on repealing the existing law limiting the number of Major and Brigadier Generals, but will recommend the selection of the most meritorious nominees for confirmation to fill the vacancies now existing.

TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Jan. 27.

THE CAPTURE OF BRITISH VESSELS.

The Secretary of State, in answer to the Senate's resolution of the 13th inst., in relation to the capture of British vessels sailing from one British port to another, having on board articles contraband of war, for the use of the rebels, sent seventeen papers, dating from the 26th of July to the 26th of February, with many other minor letters.

The first is a letter from Mr. SEWARD inquiring relative to the capture of the steamer Adela, bound to Nassau, by the United States steamer Quaker City.

The captain of the latter denied having fired into the Adela within two and a half miles from the coast, without showing his colors, and claims that he proceeded under the instructions of Flag-Officer McKEAN in the pursuit of a vessel of her appearance, with a cargo of contraband goods.

Mr. SEWARD entered into the correspondence at length to show that the Government had no claim to claim any unusual belligerent rights, and promised to send the correspondence in evidence to the Maritime Court adjudicating the case in Florida.

The United States Marshal, Lamar, furnished evidence that the vessel intended to run the blockade.

The case of the British brig Lilla is also referred to.

Lord LYONS, on Jan. 20, 1863, writes to Mr. SEWARD that Earl RUSSELL has caused a letter to be addressed to the British General Post-office, stating that as long as the present blockade lasts, great caution should be observed as to the class of vessels to which mail bags should be intrusted.

NOT A NAVAL VESSEL.

From some comments in the newspapers, it is proper to mention that the gunboat Sidell, reported as having surrendered to the rebels, did not belong to the navy, and there is no such officer as VAN DEER connected with it.

REVENUE DECISION.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has decided that Assessors may assess as dealers, persons who sell commodities from vessels, boats or barks, or who sell logs and lumber in rafts; and the Assessors will report to the Collectors accordingly, together with the name of the vessel employed in each case, if any, and the license will be prepared in conformity with such return. Applications for license should be made, and the licenses issued, in the collection district where the licensee resides.

CONFIRMED.

JOHN ROWE has been confirmed by the Senate as Postmaster at Portsmouth, Ohio.

THE PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Jan. 27.

Mr. HOWARD, of Michigan, (Rep.,) introduced a bill relative to the time of holding Circuit and District Courts of the United States. Referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. POMEROY, of Kansas, (Rep.,) introduced a bill supplementary to the act to provide for the better organization of the military establishment of the United States. Referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) introduced a bill to authorize contracts to be made in such States as may advance pay and allotment to volunteers and militia in the service of the United States. Referred to the Military Committee.

Mr. HALE, of New-Hampshire, (Rep.,) offered a resolution instructing the Committee on Naval Affairs to inquire into the expediency of increasing the pay of Paymasters' Clerks in the navy. Adopted.

Mr. BROWNING, of Illinois, (Rep.,) offered a resolution, which was adopted, that the Military Committee inquire into the expediency of authorizing the President to offer the volunteers now in the service such bounty as he may deem necessary to secure their enlistment; also, into the expediency of authorizing the President to offer such bounty for the reenlistment of such volunteers for one year or a longer time; also into the expediency of providing by law for three months volunteers, either by enlistment or draft.

Mr. HARLAN, of Iowa, (Rep.,) offered a resolution that the rules of the Senate be so amended as to provide for a Committee on Agriculture. Laid over.

Mr. LATHAM, of California, (Dem.,) moved to take up the resolution calling for the record of the Fitz-John Porter Court-martial.

Mr. HALE, of New-Hampshire, (Rep.,) objected. He thought it was a bad practice for the Senate to make itself a Court of Errors to go over these court-martials.

Mr. HOWARD, of Michigan, (Rep.,) hoped that the resolution would be adopted. He thought the record ought to go to the country and be read by every one.

Mr. FESSENDEN, of Maine, (Rep.,) said he was rather in favor of having the record printed and go to the country. But the record had been printed; he had received a copy and read it. He believed that the result arrived at was amply justified by the facts, and no other result could have been reached in any event. But the record was very voluminous; it would create a vast expense under the present circumstances, and as it was already printed, he did not think it best to adopt the resolution.

Mr. FOSTER of Connecticut (Rep.) was of the opinion that Congress and the Senate had nothing to do with the control of the army, or with Court-martial.

The motion was disagreed to—yeas 16, nays 22.

Mr. LANE of Kansas (Rep.) called up the bill to provide for the removal of Indians from Kansas. Passed.

Mr. WILKINSON of Minnesota (Rep.) called up the bill to provide for the removal of the Sioux Indians from Minnesota.

The bill was passed.

A message was received from the President, transmitting the Report of the Secretary of State, and the documents concerning the capture of British vessels sailing from one port to another, having on board articles contraband of war.

Mr. TRUMBULL, of Illinois, (Rep.,) called up the bill for the indemnification of the President and other persons for suspending the privileges of the writ of habeas corpus and acts done in pursuance thereof.

Mr. DAVIS, of Kentucky, (Union,) proceeded to speak at length on the passage of the bill, characterizing the Proclamations of the President suspending the writ of habeas corpus and declaring emancipation, as the most extraordinary documents ever issued, claiming that the President had no power to do anything of the kind, and such acts were palpable violations of the Constitution and laws of the United States.

The President might as well have issued a proclamation to suspend the Constitution itself. Mr. LINCOLN has fairly shouldered the abolition policy to destroy Slavery in violation of all constitutional laws and of his oath, but the people have declared in thunder tones that the Constitution shall not be destroyed.

Mr. HARRIS, of New-York, (Rep.,) moved to amend so as to make the provisions of the bill apply to criminal as well as to civil cases.

Mr. POWELL, of Kentucky, (Dem.,) said that the object of the whole bill was to prevent persons who have been injured by the myrmidons of power from any relief in the Courts; but the people would treat with scorn and contempt the wickedness of this Administration, and its usurpations of power. No upright people could do otherwise.

Mr. DOOLITTLE, of Wisconsin, (Rep.,) said he had listened to hundreds of speeches from the Senator from Kentucky, and the whole burden of them had been denunciation of the Administration who were struggling to put down the rebellion; but we never heard any one word in condemnation of those men who were dripping with the blood of their country men, who are stained with perjury, corruption and treason, who are his associates. But from day to day he denounces the President of the United States, aspersing his (LINCOLN'S) motives. The present Administration bears upon its shoulders a responsibility never borne since the days of WASHINGTON, and the responsibility has been borne with a single purpose to preserve the Constitution and live up to the oath taken to protect and defend it, as to the question of the power to suspend the writ of habeas corpus, there is an honest difference of opinion about it, and the President of the United States, than whom a more honest and patriotic man does not live, believed he was acting under the Constitution in suspending the writ and making arrests, and the Senators from Kentucky and others spend most of their time in denouncing and trying to break down the Administration, but never a word against the rebels who are trying to overthrow the Government. He (DOOLITTLE) had listened to this kind of talk until he was tired.

Mr. POWELL replied, saying that he had said that those who went into the rebellion were doing wrong. He (POWELL) felt it his duty to denounce all violations of the Constitution.

Mr. HARLAN, of Iowa, (Rep.,) asked if the Senator from Kentucky was not prejudicing the case in arraigning the President—that was the duty of the other House, and the Senator was to act as a judge.

Mr. POWELL said that he had a right as a Senator of a sovereign State to arraign the President, and, further, he thought that the President ought to be arraigned for his violations of the Constitution.

Mr. COLLAMER, of Vermont, (Rep.,) said that the Senator seemed to think there must be no coercion to preserve the Government, but others thought differently. The last President of the United States (Mr. BUCHANAN) held that no State had a right to secede, but that nobody had any right to prevent them. That was thought to be something new, but was not. It was as old as Dogberry's instructions to the watch to arrest all vagrom men—to bid them stand in the Prince's name, and if they would not stand, to let them go, and be thankful they had got rid of a villain. The Senator from Kentucky would have no force used to carry out the laws of the Government, or men to preserve it in a struggle for life. This bill simply provides for the transfer of these cases to the United States Courts. If there were constitutional questions to be decided, it was proper that such cases should be transferred to the United States Courts.

A long debate ensued on the bill.

Mr. SAULSBURY, of Delaware, (Dem.,) made a long speech, and was called to order several times in the course thereof. Finally, when censuring the course of the President of the United States, calling him an imbecile, and calling him by name, the Vice-President called him to order, and requested the Senator to take his seat.

Mr. SAULSBURY continuing his remarks,

The Vice-President said if the Senator did not take his seat, he should order the Sergeant-at-Arms to take him in charge.

Mr. SAULSBURY—Then the voice of freedom is not allowed in the American Senate.

The Vice-President—The Sergeant-at-Arms will take the Senator in custody.

Mr. SAULSBURY was thereupon taken out of the Senate, displaying a revolver, which he took from his coat pocket. After a short time Mr. SAULSBURY came in the Senate again, and began to speak.

Mr. DOOLITTLE called him to order, on the ground that he had been called to order for contempt of the Senate, and could not be allowed to go on without leave of the Senate.

Mr. SAULSBURY—Does the Senator from Wisconsin say that I am in the contempt of any honorable man?

The Chair (Mr. CLARK)—The Senator from Delaware will take his seat, as he is out of order.

Mr. SAULSBURY—Just as I please, or otherwise.

Cries of "Order."

The Chair—The Senator will take his seat, and the Sergeant-at-Arms will take him in custody.

After further discussion,

Mr. SAULSBURY attempted to speak.

The Chair—The Senator will take his seat.

Mr. SAULSBURY—No, Sir!

Mr. SUMNER rose to the question of order that the Senator from Delaware had been committed to the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms, and he saw him on the floor.

The Chair said, the Senator was in the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms, and if he made further disturbance would be removed from the Senate.

Mr. SAULSBURY took his seat, shaking his fists and swearing at the Sergeant-at-Arms and Mr. SUMNER.

After further discussion the amendment was agreed to by yeas 27, nays 15.

Mr. SUMNER offered an amendment that any person not in the military or naval service of the United States, and not subject to the articles of war, who shall be arrested in any State or district wherein the process of Courts is not obstructed, during the rebellion, for aiding the rebellion or obstructing the execution of any law or military order, shall be discharged unless, within ten days, charges are filed in the Clerk's office of the district where he is arrested; and it shall be the duty of the Judge to discharge such person or hold him to bail, as he may deem necessary for the safety of the country.

Mr. SUMNER'S amendment was rejected. He afterward renewed it, and being amended on motion of Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, so as to allow thirty days during which changes should be made and presented to the Court, it was adopted.

The bill passed—yeas, 32; nays, 7. Adjourned at 10½.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Jan. 27.

The House considered the Senate bill, providing for the pay of certain persons over forty-five years of age, who entered the military service.

Mr. HOLMAN, of Indiana, (Dem.,) offered an amendment, which was debated, to increase the pay of soldiers two dollars per month, and to pay to those who are honorably discharged before the expiration of their term of service a proportionable amount of bounty.

During the discussion, the justice of such legislative action was urged, while on the opposite side it was contended that if the soldiers were wounded, they received hospital attentions, besides being placed on the pension rolls. In addition to this, many of them had received State bounties, and it was necessary to pay debts already contracted instead of incurring additional obligations.

The bill was recommitted to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. WICKLIFFE, of Kentucky, (Union,) rose to a question of privilege. He had been charged with being instrumental in violating the rules of this House. He explained that in consequence of his crippled condition the doorkeeper had been in the habit of inviting into the hall persons wishing to see him, instead of compelling him to go out for that purpose. The other day he received a card signed by a man named GARRETT. The business was unpleasant to him. GARRETT wanted to borrow money, and he had none to loan, and, therefore, he soon dismissed him. [Laughter.] This statement was written to the Cincinnati Gazette by the Clerk to the Committee on Foreign Affairs. The gentleman from Ohio, (Mr. VALLANDIGHAM,) in the same article, was said to have shown GARRETT, a wounded rebel officer, among the hall. Mr. VALLANDIGHAM] had been deprived of his Confederate companion. He thought that the writer of that letter ought to be expelled from the Committee.

Mr. VALLANDIGHAM, of Ohio, (Dem.,) disclaimed any knowledge of GARRETT, and characterized the statement as unqualifiedly false, without the shadow of a foundation.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on the Deficiency bill.

Messrs. CRAWFORD, of Kansas, and SHELLABARGER, of Ohio, made speeches on National affairs.

The Committee here rose, when

Mr. STEVENS, of Pennsylvania, (Rep.,) offered a substitute for the bill heretofore offered by him authorizing President LINCOLN to enrol, arm and equip in the land and naval service such number of Volunteers of African descent as he may deem useful to suppress the present rebellion, and for such term as he may prescribe, not exceeding seven years, &c.

Mr. HICKMAN, of Pennsylvania, (Rep.,) offered a substitute authorizing President LINCOLN to raise not exceeding three hundred regiments of persons of African descent or colored persons, to be uniformed, armed and equipped as he may direct, for the term of seven years unless sooner discharged.

The substitute also proposes to establish a line of steamers for the deportation of freed persons of color to Liberia. Adjourned.

THE McDOWELL COURT-OF INQUIRY.

Special Report for the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Jan. 27, 1863.

In the McDOWELL Court of Inquiry to-day, Lieut.-Col. LOCKE, late of Gen. F. J. PORTER'S Staff, now Assistant Adjutant-General in the Army of the Potomac, was called by the Court. He stated that on the afternoon of the 29th of August, between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock, to the best of his recollection, he was the bearer of a message from Gen. McDOWELL, on the Manassas and Gainesville road, near Bethlehem Church, to Gen. Porter, up the road toward Gainesville; that the message was about as follows: "Give my compliments to Gen. Porter, and say to him that I am going to right, and will take Gen. King with me; that I think he had better remain where he is at present, and if it should become necessary for him to fall back, he can do so on my left." This was the only message he bore from Gen. McDOWELL to Gen. Porter.

Question by Gen. McDowell—Will witness state under what circumstances he chanced to see Gen. McDowell on the evening of the 29th, near Bethlehem Church? For what purpose did he come there?

Answer—I was the bearer of a message from Gen. Porter to Gen. King. As I rode down the Gainesville Road to Bethlehem Church I saw Gen. McDowell, with another officer, standing by the side of the road. This officer I took to be Gen. King, and I delivered the message to him, first asking him if he was Gen. King, to which he assented. It was upon the delivery of my message to Gen. King that Gen. McDowell gave me the message to Gen. Porter. The message that I bore to Gen. King was for him to remain where he was until further orders. Gen. King was at that time standing on the left of Gen. McDowell, leaning against the fence. I remained there but a short time,—probably not over ten minutes.

Gen. Rufus King called by Gen. McDowell—Question.—Did you, or not, on the 29th of August last, receive a message from Gen. Fitz John Porter, by the hands of Lieut.-Col. Locke, at or near Bethlehem Church, in the presence of Gen. McDowell?

Answer—No, Sir; I did not.

Question—Were you and Gen. McDowell together at all, near Bethlehem Church, on that day, after parting at Manassas?

Answer—No, Sir; we were not.

Answer to the Court—I did not receive any order from Lieut.-Col. Locke at all.

Capt. Hughes, of Gen. King's Staff, called by Gen. McDowell. I was with Gen. King on the morning of the 29th of August, on the occasion of the march of his Division from Manassas toward Gainesville. He and Gen. McDowell were not together on that day near Bethlehem Church. They were not together at all on that day after they parted at Manassas, about 9 or 9 o'clock in the morning. Gen. King was sick, and had been for some time, and did not exercise command over his division after 9 o'clock on that morning.

Capt. Duncan A. Pell, late of Gen. McClellan's Staff, who was taken prisoner by the rebels at Bristow Station on the afternoon of the 27th, was called by the Court. He stated that he was present, in custody of the rebels, at the battle that took place on and near Groveton Heights, on the 29th; that the rebel force there, from the best information he could gather, was about twenty-five thousand, being the whole of Jackson's corps, three divisions; that the enemy on that occasion were decidedly worsted; that he did not have an opportunity of observing or learning whether any movement of our troops about that time was improper or not.

Gen. Milroy not yet being present for examination, the Court went into secret session for deliberation, with the understanding that when the doors were opened at 3 o'clock, they would adjourn until 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

—Col. Segoine, of the last regiment raised in the vicinity of Syracuse, has tendered his resignation on account of ill health.

FROM THE STATE CAPITAL.

The Legislature at Work at Last.

Postponement of the Resolutions Against Speaker Callicot.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Tuesday, Jan. 27, 1863.

"Beaten but not vanquished," is the motto and rule of action of Mr. F. C. FIELDS, who for three weeks monopolized the time and patience of the House. His purpose is still the same, and he returns to the work with a preamble and series of resolutions looking to the impeachment of the Speaker. There is not a Union member on the floor of the House, not a constituent at home, who would shrink from a proper investigation when one was required. But it is submitted, the men just foiled in their revolutionary purposes are not the ones to bring articles of impeachment or to obtain much consideration for any mere change in their tactics avowedly looking to the same end.

Mr. T. C. FIELDS is, as all but himself must by this time be prepared to confess, a poor tactician and a bad leader to follow. There is no more reason now why he should be followed than when a week ago he proposed revolution, by declaring that you may elect your Speaker, but you cannot inaugurate him. This view of the case addresses itself more directly to the Democratic members, who were led into the road to ruin, than to the Union side of the House. Proceeding from almost any other source, and proposed under almost any other circumstances, the demand for investigation would certainly have encountered no opposition from them. But now the motive is chiefly to be looked at. No one can doubt what it is. It has already been declared. It appeals to the self-respect of the majority. Not all the T. C. Fields in the land can make a single man believe that his motive in making the charges is one whit better than when, day after day, he declared "you cannot legislate;" "you cannot inaugurate your Speaker;" "we will never submit," besides other threats of unmistakable revolutionary import. He stands committed to thwart all legislation, and he is but carrying out that purpose by calling for investigation without making a charge worthy of a moment's consideration.

But the Union members do not, will not, object to proper investigation. They will insist, however, that it shall be allowed to have a wide range. In such a case Mr. T. C. FIELDS and, perhaps, some of his friends, may come to have a "realizing sense" of the pleasures of partaking of the dose prepared for other lips. Let the investigation go on. Let us know what bargains have been made, what bargains proposed—not omitting the arrangements entered into at certain dinners given to the New-York delegation in that City a short time prior to the opening of the session. Let Mr. DEAN and his friend, FERNANDO WOOD, be called as witnesses. By all means let investigation go on, and when it is over let Mr. T. C. FIELDS say how he likes it.

In accordance with the policy, general and specific, of Mr. T. C. FIELDS, that gentleman this morning appeared in his seat, with a good part of the State Library before him. The inevitable gentleman was evidently prepared to consume at least one week. The question before the House was the preamble and series of resolutions looking to the impeachment of Mr. Speaker CALLICOT. In presenting them, Mr. T. C. FIELDS acted consistently at least with his threat to throw every obstacle in his power in the way of legislation. And as his tongue was his chief weapon, Mr. T. C. FIELDS proceeded to use it, and the House composed itself for the infliction. One hour was enough, and at the expiration of that time, on motion of Mr. FLETCHER, the whole subject was postponed till one week from Thursday next.

It was not a promising fact that the House went off into the consideration of half sober and half whimsical, and altogether unwise resolutions, directing the payment of the members and officers of the House be made in specie—a direct and almost fatal blow against the currency of the country. It took an hour to get right, which was gratifying. It were better, however, not to have got wrong on the question.

One week from to-day is the time fixed by the statute for the election of United States Senator. The interest attending the contest for the Speakership has had the effect to postpone that question even in the conversation of members among themselves. It is to be presumed that now it has been demonstrated that there is a majority, and that the revolution which threatened to override it has been postponed, if not crushed, the question will soon become the subject of consultation. I think it may with entire truth be said that the majority, at least, are entirely uncommitted on the subject, and free to select from the list of gentlemen named in connection with the Senatorship. At this time, it may not be improper to say that the list includes the names of several distinguished gentlemen, among whom are EX-GOV. MORGAN, Hon. J. S. Wadsworth, Hon. H. J. Raymond, Hon. Preston King, Hon. Curtis Noyes, Hon. Wm. M. Evarts, Hon. D. Dudley Field, Hon. C. E. Sedgwick. It is probable I may not have mentioned all who have influential friends, as well as honorable aspirations for the Senatorship. And yet there would be a large degree of safety in the prediction that from this list the selection will be made. To this duty the Union members will address themselves with a proper sense of its importance. With such a list from which to select, increased as it probably will be, the selection is quite certain to be equally honorable to themselves and the State.

RODERICK.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

ALBANY, Tuesday, Jan. 27.

REPORTS FAVORABLY.

Amending the acts relative to the Albany and Susquehanna Railroad. It extends the time for the completion of the road, and authorizes laying a portion of the road with lighter rails.

By Mr. MONROE—Amending the General Banking law.

By Mr. CLARK—Amending the Revised Statutes relative to the Dog tax.

Mr. BELL moved the following concurrent resolution:

Resolved, That the Senate and Assembly will on Tuesday next proceed to the Election of a United States Senator.

The resolution was laid on the table under the rule.

ASSEMBLY.

ALBANY, Tuesday, Jan. 27.

Mr. FIELDS, of New-York, in pursuance of a question of privilege on the proposed investigation into the charges of corruption against the Speaker elect, (CALLICOT,) took the floor, and said that it came to his knowledge that the Republican members of this House held a caucus last night and agreed to smother this investigation or so limit and confine it as to screen the person charged with offence. The Republican members proposed to require a specific charge and to confine the investigation to that, and limit it to the present session. They dared not go to the people upon such a record. Charges have been openly made of corruption, as a member of the Legislature of 1860, against the present Speaker. Mr. FIELDS here cited instances of investigation by the Legislature of 1862 into the acts of a past session. He also referred to the case of JAY GUNSON, where an investigation was ordered only upon rumor.

Mr. LAMPS explained that he had not desired to stop investigation by his remarks yesterday. He did desire that the investigation of this case should be thorough. He denied that he had asked Mr. CALLICOT for any election on any Committee. He (LAMPS) had expressed the belief that this Legislature had not, and Mr. CALLICOT had told him that he thought that this honorable Assembly should by most fair means establish the fitness of the Speaker to occupy that position.

The resolutions were then postponed for a week from Thursday next.

The business of the House was then taken up.

A large number of bills were passed, among them the following:

By Mr. MCCLEW—To create the Police Department of New-York.

By Mr. TALLMADGE—To create the office of Receiver of Taxes in West Farms.

By Mr. O'BRIEN—To legalize the system of primary elections in New-York.

By Mr. SMITH—To incorporate the Shipwright Association.

By Mr. LEARY—To extend the privileges of exempt firemen.

By Mr. KOCH—To regulate the Staten Island Ferries.

By Mr. FITZE—To elect the City Inspector of New-York by the people.

By Mr. LOCKWOOD—To remove the capital of the State to the geographical centre of the State.

By Mr. FITZE—To regulate the gas companies of New-York.

To give the Board of Councilmen of New-York equal powers with the Board of Aldermen.

By Mr. SEYMOUR—The Pulteney Estate bill.

By Mr. MAYHAM—The Susquehanna Railroad Aid bill.

Mr. DEAN offered resolutions condemning the arbitrary arrests of the Government, and creating a commission to investigate into the facts of such arrests.

Mr. GILBERT introduced similar resolutions.

Mr. DEAN introduced a concurrent resolution to proceed to the election of a United States Senator on Tuesday next.

Mr. LEARY introduced a concurrent resolution favoring a Convention of all the States to facilitate the return of the seceding States to their allegiance with the view of attaining an early peace.

Mr. LEVENSON called up the resolution instructing the Comptroller to pay the Members and Officers of the Assembly in gold or its equivalent.

Mr. DEAN moved to add "that all laborers and mechanics be paid in gold."

Mr. REDFIELD charged that the resolution was an attempt to discredit and depreciate the currency of the country and the policy of the General Government.

Mr. MURPHY said that as a member of the Assembly he wanted his payment in lawful money of the United States. The law gave him three dollars a day. If he received these Government "greenbacks," when he went out to pass them he found that they were worth only fifty-two cents on the dollar. Who depreciated the currency? The General Government. Go to the Banks to-day and you will find that their best funds are over thirty per cent discount. Mr. HOUGHTON said that it was an offence against the Government to exact its currency by demanding payment in gold. The Comptroller of the State should be impeached for paying the interest on the State debt in coin.

Mr. CORNELL thought that this was an indirect attempt on the part of members to obtain increased pay.

After further debate, Messrs. ANDREWS, DAVIS and CORNELL opposing the resolution, the previous question was ordered, and the resolution was lost.

While the vote was being taken Mr. SEYMOUR read a letter from the Comptroller addressed to Mr. FISHER, which is as follows:

DEAR SIR: Your note is this moment received. No resolution of the Assembly can make it possible to pay its members in specie.

There is no specie to pay with, and it cannot be procured without buying at the market premium of fifty per centum.

Specie cannot be purchased unless the Legislature passes an act making an appropriation for the purpose.

Yours, truly, L. ROBINSON.

Miss LAVINIA WARREN is drawing great crowds to the Museum. Now that the Manager is giving dramatic performances in the morning, as well as afternoon and evening, ladies and children can avoid the greatest crowds by attending her morning levees. As the time draws nigh for the close of her exhibition, the crowds increase. But few days remain to see her.
